Comments on Anything and Everything for the Week
By Norman W. Ralston

Spring

Spring came in on me today. Just as it came for an extended stay throughout the country this week. Officially, the papers say, it was welcomed at 3:45 p. m. on the afternoon of Tuesday. And I am lazily inclined to dream of a "host of waving daffodils," a field of golden buttercups, the trill of the birds on my window sill at early morn, and I long for a trek through some virgin forest, awakening now with a thousand jivial sounds. Who is there who would deny spring at her doorstep any day? There is something about Fall that is beautiful; the quietness of the harvest fields, the golden rod, but a melancholy feeling obstructs your real happiness; Winter brings its bustle and its inclement days; Summer its terrifying heat; but Spring comes around, a cheerful child of god, kneeling at your feet and giving them wings, and softly touching your hair.

Love At 120

Does one ever grow too old for love? The Herald this week denies that it does not. Love makes the world go around. And Senora Francisca Crijalva Valverde, who has just become the bride of David Valverde at the age of 120, surrounded by some of her progeny, and sitting with her 78 year old husband, contends that love never dies out. Blind and weak from the weight of her years, scarcely able to move she is so feeble, Senora Valverde said: "I have lived long, and now I am old and sick and tired. The priest told me we ought to be married by him before I died and I know I can't live much longer, so we were married. I am ready to die when my time comes for I am old, very old." And the 120 year old bride closed the interview at her home in Phoenix, Ariz., by falling asleep in her chair. So does love move the world.

Another Example

Miss Elizabeth Williamson, of Kalamazoo, first became interested in his art. She carried on correspondence with the man for a year. Now she plans to marry Yashio Marling, 52 year old Japanese illustrator, whom she has never seen. So love has come to her just as it did to Senora Valverde. All of which may be due to spring. We write mostly of spring and love, joint companions, in the column this week, which is entirely fitting because it is seasonal. All except real love which lives through the winter of life, which knows no danger, which has no creed or racial hatred, probably the reason why real love is so wonderful. Love should brook no cast; neither should it foster creeds. Too many marriages are made for the sake of "families."

Earthquakes

The American embassy in Mexico City was damaged by a quake the other day. Panic spread through several Mexican cities. Mexicans are superstitious as a rule. Most foreigners are. All of which starts one to wondering what the bowels of the earth contain to cause such disturbances, such severe and fatal catastrophes as the Japanese earthquake not so many years ago. Man goes along at his task from day to day, dreaming, planning and toiling. But he dies without ever finding out what it is all about. He knows little of the elements, or of the unseen hand that seems to guide the great events of the world. There are many, many things we will never know of and perhaps it is just as well—what would happen to invention and ingenuity if we knew everything!

"I Told You So!"

So much is being written and has been written about Lindbergh that no one seems to care about hearing about him anymore. But we can't help observing at this time that the folks who predicted he would "go to the devil," get reckless with his fame and fortune, and squander his youth, cannot say, "I told you so," as yet, and probably won't, for Lindy has lived through the worst of it and will probably survive the rest. And there are a lot of other young American people filled with energy and pep and who are entitled to certain other privileges older people can't enjoy and aren't supposed to, but who come in for dire criticisms mostly because other people are jealous because they cannot do the same thing. Youth isn't as bad as it is painted.

PREPARATIONS ARE MADE FOR PRIMARY HERE

Contract For Printing Ballots
Is Awarded at Meeting of Election Board

At a meeting of the Board of Elections Friday evening at its office in the court house bids were opened for the printing and furnishing of the preferential presidential ballots for the primary election to be held in this county on Tuesday, April 24.

The bid was awarded to the Fitzpatrick Printing company. Voters will have to declare their politics in order to vote the ballot.

Women will have to declare that they are 21 years of age or over before they can vote. There is no contest on the Democratic ticket, but in the Republican ticket there is a lively contest on between U. S. Senator Frank B. Willis, of Ohio, and Herbert Hoover, of California, secretary of commerce in Calvin Coolidge's cabinet for the presidential nomination.

The Democratic candidates to the National convention to be held June 21, at Houston, Texas are:

Delegates:— M. A. Daugherty, first choice, Atlee Pomerene; second choice, George White. J. M. Borrer, first choice, Atlee Pomerene; second choice, George White. Alternates:— Robert Polen, first choice, Atlee Pomerene; second choice, George White. Maude S. Watson, first choice, Atlee Pomerene; second choice, George White.

The Republican delegates and alternates to the Republican National convention to be held at Kansas City, Mo., on June 12, are, Delegates:— Frank B. Mauller, first choice, Frank B. Willis; second choice, Frank O. Lowden. Edward D. Ricketts, first choice, Frank B. Willis; second choice, Frank O. Lowden. George Florence, first choice, Herbert Hoover; second choice, James R. Garfield. John B. Barbee, first choice, Herbert Hoover; second choice, James R. Garfield.

Alternates:— Chris A. Weldon, first choice, Frank B. Willis; second choice, Charles R. Fisher. Curtis S. Randolph, first choice, Frank B. Willis; second choice, Frank O. Lowden. Mary Story Pattison, first choice, Herbert Hoover; second choice, James R. Garfield. J. F. Thompson, first choice, Herbert Hoover; second choice, James R. Garfield.

The delegates and alternates to the Democratic State convention to be held in June are:

Delegates:— Wayne A. Hoover; Mrs. Bernard Young; Thomas F. Jeffries; George W. Stoker; C. E. Myers; Bertha S. Jones; Mrs. Guy Heffner; Dr. A. L. Stump.

Alternates:— William G. Hamilton; Lottie W. Downs; Elizabeth N. Tootle; W. A. Duvall; Lyall W. Cryder; James B. Johnson; Elizabeth Heffner; Mrs. J. B. Cromley; O. M. Beckett.

The delegates and alternates to the State Republican convention to be held on June 24 are:

Delegates:— Ida B. Griffith; George Beers; Mrs. Hattie McKinley; Mrs. Helen Black Anderson; C. C. Chapple; B. T. Hedges; G. W. Morrison.

Alternates:— Howard E. Noecker; Samuel Lindsey; Daniel E. Van Vickle; E. W. Beatty; Charles Schwin.

DEATH TERMINATES TWO YEARS' ILLNESS

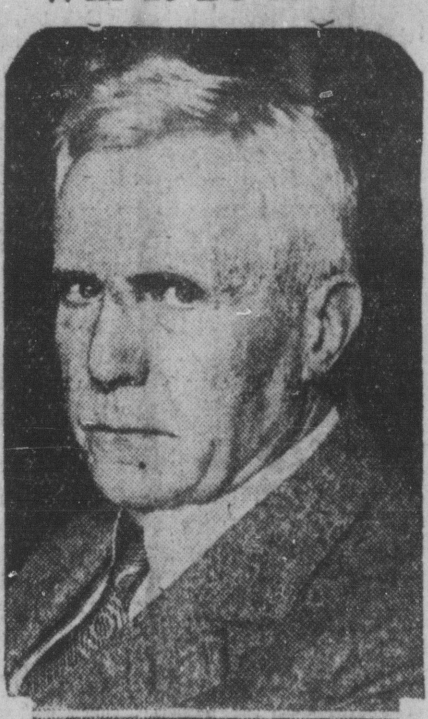

Mrs. Marie Redman Lewis, 31, colored, wife of Frank Lewis, died at her home on East Ohio street at 7:45 o'clock Saturday morning after an illness of two years with tuberculosis.

She was born on Oct. 7, 1895, in Pickaway county, the daughter of John and Dolly Thomas Redman.

She is survived by her husband; two children, Francis and Virginia; a sister, Iona Redman, and two brothers, John and Albert Redman.

Mrs. Lewis was a member of the second Baptist church where funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m., Tuesday, the Rev. R. D. Grant officiating. Burial will be in Forest cemetery in charge of Mader and Ebert.

Will It Be Reed?

James A. Reed, Democratic Senator from Missouri, is one of the acknowledged contenders for the seat in the White House, which will be vacated one year from this month.

THREE DEBATES ARE TAKEN BY RED AND BLACK

Circleville High School Speakers Make Good Showing With Other Schools.

The Circleville debating teams have the honor of winning three out of four meetings in the interscholastic debate. These have taken place for the past three Friday afternoons, the negative team from one town coming to Circleville, and the Circleville affirmative going to that town, and debating in their high school.

The first opponent was Lancaster, three weeks ago. Last week, Circleville won in Circleville, but lost in Washington, Friday, the affirmative team won in Circleville, and the negative in Portsmouth. The presiding officer here was Meeker Terwilliger, and the judge was Professor Raymer McKelton, of the English department of Ohio university, at Athens.

On the Circleville affirmative team which debated here were Ewing Ross, Robert Pickens, and Mabel Young, named in order as they spoke. Herbert Hammill was alternate. On the negative team from Portsmouth in their speaking order were Mary Hazlebeck, Drusella Lykens, and Carl Tucker, with Earnest Cover, alternate.

Those who went to Portsmouth were Veronica Kuhns, Marie Kellstadt, Alice Roof and Kenneth Elm. They were accompanied by Miss Velma Watson. Mr. Wylie Fetherlin, the public speaking instructor, was in charge of the training of the pupils, and proved most efficient.

Frogs Take Roles As Harbingers Of Spring's Arrival

If you think spring hasn't visited Circleville the past two days, you're not a student of nature.

Motorists near the city—and there were plenty of them Friday night, too, because of the balmy air—reported hearing scores of frogs croaking while now and then a few hundred crickets chimed in.

Spring coats made their appearance and several were noticed with coats off and sleeves rolled up—and the first straw hat was seen on the streets of Circleville Friday.

Anyhow, it's great weather.

NEW MEASURE GETS PRAISE AND CENSURE

Compromise Flood Relief Bill
Arouses Variety of Comment in Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(INS)—The new compromise Mississippi Flood Control bill was praised and criticized by the various interested factions today.

While the measure was regarded as less satisfactory than the original Jones bill by the president who has stood out for part payment by the states, it has placated the group which demanded tributary protection. Senator Willis (R) of Ohio, who spoke for the tributary group, said the bill was the best way out of a bad situation, and house flood control leaders characterized the new measure as a "great step forward."

"I think the administrative features are not so good," Willis declared, but added, "there must be some bill, however, so I intend to support it in the main features." He said the plan provided "too much supervision." The bill will be introduced in the senate Monday by Senator Jones, (R), of Washington.

Although the bill was unanimously agreed upon yesterday, it was learned today that all members of the senate commerce committee reserved the right to object to different sections on the floor.

The new bill's principal departure from previous plans is in its provision for tributary waters, and elimination of the old section imposing payment of 1-3 of the cost of building the levees up to the 1914 level on the states. It also enlarges the membership of the governing board from three to five persons, adding one civilian engineer and the secretary of war to the list.

MRS. GOBLE'S RITES HELD ON SATURDAY

Mrs. Mary Harber Gobble died at her home in Pickaway township Friday morning at 11 o'clock. Her death followed child birth. She was born in Gallia county, the daughter of Walter and Martha Johnson Harber. She was married to Leonard Gobble at Five Points on Nov. 26, 1926. Her husband survives.

The funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Albaugh company chapel, the Rev. E. S. Toensmeier officiating. Interment was in Forest cemetery.

The child, which was the cause of the mother's death, was born dead, and it was interred in Forest cemetery Friday morning.

JUSTICE OPERATES FAST IN GEORGIA

Justice moves swiftly in Georgia if the case of the two thieves who stole the automobile of Ray Odaffer, formerly of Ashville, is any indication.

Odaffer's car was stolen from the streets of Atlanta, Ga., last Friday night and on Saturday morning it was recovered when it was found in the possession of two colored men who had the car filled with groceries, which had been taken from a burglarized store.

The two men were immediately tried in courts, found guilty and have already started to serve sentences of five years at hard labor.

CRITICALLY ILL

Mrs. Leland Pontius (Mabel Stage) is critically ill at her home on East Main street, following the birth of a daughter, Friday evening. The baby, who had been named Mary Ann, lived but a short time after birth. The body will be placed temporarily in the mausoleum, at Reber Hill, by Mader and Ebert, funeral directors.

FUMES KILL TWO

WIFE SLAYER UNDER ARREST; ADMITS CRIME

Grove City Blacksmith Arrested in Columbus Following Hammer Attack.

COLUMBUS, O., March 24.—(UP)—Arthur Battelle, Grove City blacksmith who killed his wife, Minnie, mother of eight children, with a hammer, was under arrest today and police have obtained a partial confession from him.

Battelle was captured by Acting Police Sergeant Robert Cline at the home of Albert Stoneburner. He told Cline he and his wife had quarreled bitterly and that he hit her with something, he couldn't remember what.

Mrs. Battelle died Thursday after being removed from a closet in which police say Battelle nailed her. Shortly after the man's arrest, police found a letter written by Mrs. Battelle which revealed jealousy as the motive.

The letter told how Battelle objected to the presence in their home of a boarder who was "too friendly" with Mrs. Battelle. Mrs. Battelle wrote how she saw the man daily and added that she intended to divorce her husband.

A charge of first degree murder was lodged against Battelle late yesterday.

LASKER'S GIFT TO G. O. P. UNRECORDED

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(INS)—Albert D. Lasker, former chairman of the United States shipping board contributed $25,000 to the Republican cause in 1920 of which no record was made by the late Fred W. Upham, Republican national treasurer, it was revealed today at the senate oil inquiry.

Lasker testified he gave the money to Upham. The Upham records for 1920 showed no such contribution.

An effort of the senate committee to subpoena Harry F. Sinclair's security records was blocked by the oil main it was revealed later by Harold Kenwell, his secretary. Kenwell, who was subpoenaed to bring the security records with him, told the committee that Sinclair refused to allow him to touch the records.

Whatever the outcome of The Herald and Union Herald campaign may be the winners and losers alike will derive considerable benefit from the campaign. It will show the loyalty of friends, the requisites of success and the limitations of individuals. However, there appears to be no quitter entered in this campaign and to date the friends of candidates have been highly loyal. Many volunteer coupons are sent in, indicating that many people are interested and also that there are a great many people available to solicit. See that no friends or relatives remain unacquainted with the situation.

No one has presumed to make any predictions so far, but all candidates realize that the only way is to get out and hustle incessantly. Getting down to business, it is really surprising to see what can be accomplished. Systematic work is the winning ticket.

However, the time to step out in front is now while the going is good. Why not decide the race now by a few days of determined effort? No one is so far ahead that the lead could not be wiped out by work. The race is a toss-up to date.

The rivalry between the candidates in general increases as the campaign progresses. There are several hustlers in this campaign who believe in having a big bunch of bonus votes in reserve for the finish. And they are using the right method to secure them. They are taking advantage of the extra vote offers and running their scores up among the thousands.

Every day will count heavily from now on—see that you don't waste your time. Don't let a single day go by without getting at least five subscriptions. Time right now is the most valuable thing in the world. The campaign is half over and the prizes are yet to be won by the workers. No one has them "cinched" now and the live, hustling, wide-awake candidate who and goes after the vote offer in effect this week will in all probability secure the winning votes before Thursday night. Don't waste this golden opportunity, it will never come again.

No one candidate has such a start but what it could be overcome in a few short hours of real hard, systematic work. Don't cover the same ground twice if you can help it. Lay out your territory and see that when the campaign is over you will have covered every inch of ground in your immediate vicinity and then skip over somewhere else and make the dust fly. Keep your mind everlastingly on the one idea—"New Subscriptions"—that is the only thing under the sun that will win. This week's offer shows a liberal number of extra votes for a small amount of new subscriptions. Thirty new subscribers is not beyond the reach of every candidate in the campaign if he goes right after new subscriptions and doesn't slow up until he has them. The prizes are yet open to all. It is simply up to the candidates to decide who will win them.

This week we have an offer that will allow a large number of extra votes and if handled properly will count far more than any future offer. The right thing to do is to read the proposition carefully, then go after new ones this week harder than ever. Be sure you understand it, then forge ahead.

BECK FUNERAL WILL BE MONDAY

Services for William Beck will be held from the United Brethren church Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock the Rev. S. W. Hiles officiating. Members of the Modern Woodman of America, Eagles and Circleville Athletic club are invited to attend. Military honors will be paid the deceased. Burial will be in Forest cemetery by Mader and Ebert.

ALLIANCE WITH UNDERWORLD IS BEING CHARGED

Chief Is Also Among Those Accused in Two Mysterious
Slayings in South.

MIAMI, Fla., March 24.—(INS)—Five policemen, including chief of Police Quigg, were held in the county jail without bail today following sensational developments in the grand jury investigation into two mysterious murders, one of which occurred two and one-half years ago.

Chief Quigg, Lieutenant M. A. Tibbets and Detectives John Caudell and Tom Nazworth are held on first degree murder charges in connection with the death of H. Kier, a negro bellboy, allegedly a victim of third-degree methods.

Kier, it was said, was arrested for cooing a white woman in the lobby of a hotel where he was employed. Taken in an automobile on a lonely road, Kier was taken from the car and shot and killed, it was alleged. Detective Caudell, the indictment charges, fired two shots, one of which killed Kier.

The indictment alleged Chief Quigg conspired with the other officers to keep the negro's death a secret, and also ordered that no entry of Kier's arrest be made on the police blotter. Later, police reported that Kier's body was found on the roadside.

The fifth policeman, R. L. Wood, a detective, was held in jail charged with killing Victory W. Parnell, a carpenter, in November, 1926, without provocation, according to the indictment. Wood maintained he shot in self defense.

In returning the indictments, the grand jury declared it had discovered "an alliance between police and members of the underworld," and recommended complete reorganization of the police department and immediate removal of its present heads.

CONTEMPT CHARGES FILED BY TURNER

COLUMBUS, O., March 24.—(INS)—Attorney General Edward C. Turner today instituted proceedings in the Ohio supreme court today seeking to have Ralph W. E. Miller, son of Seba Miller, clerk of the supreme court, Attorney John B. Canfield, C. Emery Oliver and Don H. Andrews of Cleveland and John C. Jackson, of Chagrin Falls, Cuyahoga county, adjudged guilty of contempt of court. All were accused of misconduct in connection with state bar examinations.

Similar charges were filed late yesterday against Carl F. Miller, another son of Clerk Miller, now an assistant in the supreme court clerk's office; George S. Marlick Akron, and Elmer T. Fassinger, Cleveland, accusations of misconduct in connection with bar examinations, also, were contained in proceedings instituted last Thursday by Turner against six other Cleveland men.

400 MINERS OUSTED FROM THEIR HOMES

COLUMBUS, O., March 24.—(INS)—More than 400 miners and their families, occupying company houses in the vicinity of a half-dozen of the Y. & O. coal company's mines in eastern Ohio were ordered to leave the houses by Federal Judge Benson W. Hough at the conclusion of his hearing on the company's eviction suit here today.

The date on which the order will become effective was not announced. The company asked that the houses be vacated by April 1.

LIVE STOCK

TANKAGE IN PIG RATION FAVORED

Tankage in the ration of pigs being finished for market occupies a position of extreme importance according to the Kansas agricultural experiment station tests which are discussed in the Agricultural Student.

One phase of experiments conducted last summer was to determine the value of tankage as a protein supplement for fattening spring pigs on alfalfa pastures. The pigs used weighed approximately 300 pounds each and the feeding test covered a period of 115 days. One lot of these pigs was fed corn and tankage in a self-feeder and another lot was fed corn alone in a self-feeder. Both lots were run on alfalfa pasture of similar quality.

The pigs receiving no tankage gained 85 pounds per head per day; those receiving tankage, 134 pounds. The pigs receiving no tankage required 441 pounds of corn to produce 100 pounds of gain; those receiving tankage, only 380 pounds. Where no tankage was fed, the cost of grain was $6.02 per 100 pounds, but where tankage was fed, the cost was only $6.02 per hundred. The pigs fed tankage were fat and ready for market at the close of the experiment and were valued at $12.30 per 100 pounds.

The hogs that were fed tankage returned $8.75 per head for pasture, while those receiving no tankage returned $2.22 per head for pasture consumed. In this test one pound of tankage fed free choice in a self-feeder saved 46 pounds of corn in producing 100 pounds of gain. In other words, at the price of corn used in this test 84 cents per bushel, a ton of tankage was worth $138.

Many Have Difficulty in Raising Good Pigs

Many farmers have difficulty in raising vigorous, healthy pigs. Hog lots that are occupied year after year without cleaning bring about unsanitary conditions.

Some of the common diseases of hogs have their beginnings within the first few weeks of the life of the pigs. That an excessive number of pigs are lost during the spring and summer months on many farms has been observed. Unlike hog cholera when a large number of animals die within a short time, the pigs with the fifth disease often live for a much longer period. Such pigs as do survive these fifth diseases are the so-called runts and it is seldom profitable to feed them.

Intestinal round worms and pig typhoid are two common diseases of young pigs which are found under field conditions. When these pig diseases occur they invariably break out on farms where the same hog lots, pens and wallows are used for years. The soil is loaded with worm eggs and swine sewage bacteria which are ready to attack the young pigs.

Minerals Are Important Nutritional Demands

Results from the use of certain minerals with live stock are so well marked that it is safe to conclude that minerals are one of the most important nutritional requirements of all animal foods. The results that occur in cattle from which common salt is withheld is one of the most striking. When salt is not given for a few months the animals become unthrifty and suffer complete breakdown.

The results with iodine are just as evident. In those regions where goitrous young are born a small amount of iodine added to the ration during the pregnancy period prevents the trouble. This enables live stock owners to secure healthy, vigorous young, where formerly the majority of their young were either born dead or died soon after birth.

LIVE STOCK HINTS

The winter ration for beef cows should consist largely of roughage.

Sweet clover is hard to cure when cut for hay and there is some danger in feeding when moldy.

The cost of raising beef calves will be determined by the cost of maintenance of the breeding herd.

Feeding calves for baby beef is becoming a common practice on many farms. This method of producing beef calls for careful feeding and management.

Yearlings and older cattle can be wintered on a cheaper class of feed than calves. The best ration for wintering these older animals is silage and leguminous hay.

To economically grow and fatten live stock with our home-grown farm grains it is essential that we supplement them with feeds containing the constituents in which these grains are lacking.

All ewes in the flock should be placed on a light grain ration about six weeks before lambing. About a half pound a day of a mixture of three-fourths oats and one-fourth corn makes a good ration.

Bred sows need exercise. They also need alfalfa in the ration. If the alfalfa is fed in a rack placed some distance from the place where the sows sleep they will get both the exercise and the alfalfa.

If a young man is thrilled to see a girl walk along the street, it may be love or it may be a windy day. —Foster, O. Times.

Sickle Still in Use

A Galician peasant girl from her bronzed face with a russet-colored handkerchief. She wears a blouse of blue percale with sleeves of checked gingham, and a gray woolen skirt. The white and blue striped apron is crumpled by the sheaf of yellow wheat clasped in her smooth brown arms.

In Galicia many of the men emigrate to find employment, and the women carry on the work of the farm. The girls are small; the farming methods are the methods of the Homeric age. The red earth is turned in shallow furrows with wooden plows drawn by bliscut-colored oxen.

The seed is scattered by hand, and the soil is cultivated with wooden harrows. In June the grain is ripe, and the peasant girl goes into the field with her sickle.

The harvester bends low; in the left arm she gathers a cluster of grain stalks; with the sickle in her right hand she cuts a swift stroke near the roots. Catching the severed grain in the curve of the sickle, she raises it above her head and waves it in a circular movement; then, pivoting on her hips she lays the sheaf on the ground behind her. In tireless rhythm she moves across the rows of grain.

A boy follows in the field, tying the sheaves with straws. —Exchange.

Liked Old Costumes but Stuck to Modern

Looking at some pictures of Ireland, old and new, a friend remarked the other day that men on the streets of Dublin looked like men on the streets of New Bedford, and pointed regretfully to the posed picture of the typical Irish countryman of an older day, with his breeches and his characteristic hat and stick.

"What a pity they haven't stuck to the old costumes." "Well," I said, "they haven't; but if you are stuck on that rig there is nothing on earth to prevent you wearing one like it." He said that was different. "Doubtless," I went on, "you admire the Hungarian women in their quaint old-style dress." He said he did. "Do you want your wife to dress that way?" But he said that, too, was different.

"If you are so strong for the old and the picturesque," I persisted, "you might wear silk knee breeches and stockings and a gill-buttoned coat and an elaborate starched collar and a three-pointed hat, just like your Revolutionary forebears." But it was no use. I couldn't interest him in wearing old clothes, and he wouldn't think of cooking his meal in an open fireplace, preferring the standardized, dull, stupid gas stove with hot-water attachment. —C. G., in New Bedford Standard.

Tides of the Earth

Because it is by no means rigid, our earth's crust rises and falls like the ocean's tide under the gravitational attraction of the moon and sun. There is no doubt that this occurs, says Dr. Walter D. Lambert of the United States coast and geodetic survey, though difficulties have so far prevented exact measurement.

Another thing that makes the crust of the earth heave and fall, says Doctor Lambert, is the pressure exerted upon it in spots by the rising tide of the ocean. Atlantic tides have caused an observed earth bulge at Williams Bay, Wis., 800 miles away, and it is thought probable that this influence girdles the earth.

Great Actress' Prank

Sarah Bernhardt, generally credited with never having laughed or joked while on the stage, is said to have played a prank on an actress, presumably Mrs. Patrick Campbell, in retaliation for a joke the latter had played on her. There was a scene wherein she had to grasp the hands of Mrs. Campbell, to help her over the rock. The astonished Mrs. Campbell discovered that the "Divine Sarah" carried a ray egg and left it crushed in Mrs. Campbell's hands, but went on with the scene as if nothing had happened.

Unique Religious Rite

A devout Buddhist, Doctor Imazo of Osaka, Japan, held a mass for the souls of the flies whose death he had caused by a deadly fly poison he invented. He invited priests, newspaper men and friends to the ceremony and read a funeral scroll, asking the pardon of the flies. Priests chanted the funeral mass and the assembled mourners joined in prayers for the repose of the flies' souls. After the ceremony Doctor Imazo paid the priests liberally and invited the mourners to an elaborate dinner.

Short but Sweet

Prince Arthur of Connaught tells an amusing tale of his experiences when serving as governor general of South Africa. He had made a journey up the Zambesi to some of the paramount chiefs. One of them made a speech of welcome which took three-quarters of an hour to deliver. When he had finished a native interpreter came forward to explain the oration. Pointing to the chief, the interpreter discharged his task with a single sentence: "Him say him dam pleased to see you." —Grit.

SUNSHINE CUTS COST-OF PORK

In the swine feeding tests at the Iowa experiment station one of the important observations made was the effect of sunlight on nutrition. Those pigs that were fed out in the open so they got plenty of sunlight made about the same daily gain as the ones fed inside. But they did live more economically and on less food.

The pigs fed inside required an average of 425 pounds of feed for each hundred pounds gain to reach a weight of 235 pounds, while those fed out in the sunlight reached the same weight, with only 391 pounds of feed for each hundred pounds increased weight. The outside fed pigs made $1.02 more per head over and above feed costs than did those fed inside.

Mr. Esvard, who was in charge of the experiments, thinks that sunshine was responsible for the difference. He is convinced of this because of the fact that the outside fed pigs did not do nearly so well during the early part of the feeding season, when the days were short and cold. On the other hand, after the days became longer and more mild, there was a marked improvement in their gains.

During the early part of the feeding season it took about 10 pounds less feed per hundred pounds gain for the outside fed pigs, but at the close, when the days were longer, these pigs ate about 70 pounds less feed for each 100 pounds gain than did those fed inside.

The conclusion drawn is that probably in midwinter, during the short days and severe weather, it is well to feed pigs inside. When this is done, however, they should, by all means, have alfalfa hay as a source of vitamin D to take the place of the sun's rays, and to aid in assimilating minerals. As soon as the days lengthen and the weather becomes more mild, the pigs should be given their feed outside.

Feeding Baby Bees to Make Good Finish

The standard baby beef ration is five to ten pounds per head daily of clover or alfalfa hay, ten or twelve pounds of corn and one or two pounds of linseed oil meal. A few pounds of oats can be substituted for part of the corn in the ration, but with prices as they generally prevail it seems as though cheaper results are usually obtained with straight corn. Cottonseed meal can be substituted for the linseed oil meal, but unless the cottonseed meal is $10 a ton cheaper, it seems as though the linseed oil meal has a slight advantage.

If neither clover nor alfalfa hay is available, it usually pays to buy enough so that at least two pounds of leguminous hay can be fed per head daily. The calves can be started out on only four or five pounds of corn per head daily, but it is well to increase the ration as fast as the appetite permits until they are on full feed.

Cod Liver Products of Some Value to Swine

Does it pay to feed cod liver oil or cod liver meal to fall pigs in dry lot receiving a good basal ration of yellow corn, 60 per cent protein neat meal tankage and simple mineral mixtures?

Tests at the Iowa experiment station showed that high-grade cod liver oil has a nutritional value. For market hogs properly fed the added expense of the cod liver products is not justified, thinks John M. Esvard. The man who has pure hogs he is fitting for shows is in a much better position to make a profit from such materials. Further tests will be made, using other basal rations.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Experimental work in England has shown that iron is very necessary for young swine.

Proper care and management to insure a good calf crop will increase profits from beef cattle raising.

Alfalfa gives us one of our most valuable hays, but because of danger of bloat is not a safe pasture except for hogs and horses.

Opinion among hog breeders is pretty evenly divided between the true and the gable roof type of individual hoghouse, while still others favor the small shed-roof type.

Alfalfa hay is excellent for breeding cattle and sheep. It has proven at one and the same time to be the most palatable, the most productive and most permanent type of pasture for hogs.

Are you making plans now for good hog pastures next summer and fall? Alfalfa is conceded to be the best pasture. Next comes sweet red clover, rape and mixtures of rape, oats and sweet clover.

Tankage is not absolutely necessary for hogs when they have free access to alfalfa or sweet clover, but the gains will be faster with the tankage and ordinary it pays to feed at least one-fourth of a pound of tankage per head daily.

While the knowledge of what minerals are needed and the amount required is very meager, we do know that additional calcium, phosphorus, sodium, and iodine are very essential in the rations of most herds in most sections of the country.

It's fair enough, the women without a fur coat suffers outdoors, the woman who has one suffers indoors. —Wooster, O. Record.

Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., Sends First Message From Liberia To Rubber Company's Own Station In Akron—Daily Reports On Rubber Growth To Follow

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, Junior, now in the African jungles, today broadcasted the first message sent from the special radio station recently erected on the Firestone rubber plantation in the interior of Liberia, on the West Coast of Africa. The message was received at a similar station on the roof of the Firestone factories in Akron, Ohio.

This marks a new era of communication with the interior of inaccessible countries. Heretofore, the method used was to send foot messengers through jungle trails taking days to get in touch with the outside world. Broadcasting by radio direct from one continent to another thus gives the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. a great advantage in developing its million acres of rubber lands that were secured from the Liberian government. Although these properties are located over 5,000 miles from the Firestone headquarters in Akron, Ohio, it will now be possible to send reports every day by radio from the Liberian plantations to Akron.

100,000 Acres Laid Out Mr. Firestone, Jr., has been in Liberia since early January. In his first report by radio today, he said that the Liberian government officials were enthusiastically cooperating with Firestone in the company's great undertaking to make Liberia one of the important rubber-growing countries of the world. Mr. Firestone said that during the first year two 50,000-acre plantations had been laid out, one on the Du river and the other 150 miles south of the Du on the Cavalla river.

Firestone engineers in the same time had constructed over 75 miles of roads and had built and established headquarters on the two plantations, with housing facilities for the resident staffs of 118 Americans. Power plants for the lighting and refrigeration had been built, as well as hospitals and trade stores for the benefit of the Americans and also to supply the needs of the 15,000 natives who are employed in clearing the jungles and planting rubber trees.

1,500,000 Trees Planted

During the past year, according to Mr. Firestone's first radio report, over 1,500,000 rubber trees have been planted on a total of over 15,000 acres of cleared jungle lands. This is a record in rubber plantation work. It is the largest number of trees set out and acres planted by any single company in the same length of time. And Mr. Firestone stated that the rate of progress in clearing land and planting rubber trees is being constantly increased.

Mr. Firestone reported that the steamship sent over for service had been placed in commission along the Liberian coast and is now linking up the Firestone plantations and the coast town of Liberia. He expressed the hope that Firestone will soon have its own vessels operating directly between New York and Liberia, making the Atlantic passage in less than two weeks. When this is done, it will not only give Firestone an advantage of from two to five weeks in time as compared with other rubber-growing countries, but will greatly reduce the cost of transportation.

Teach Natives Trades

Great progress in the development of the Firestone trade schools was also reported. Mr. Firestone said that the natives were very anxious to learn under the instruction of the Firestone technical staff. The dark-skinned Liberians are being taught to be carpenters, blacksmiths, plumbers, electricians, automobile mechanics, sanitary engineers, soil experts and foresters.

Now that the Liberians, for the first time in the history of the country, have a system of good roads, they are becoming enthusiastic about motor transportation, and they all want to ride in automobiles, trucks or tractors. As a result, Monrovia, the capital of Liberia, has established a traffic squad to police the traffic on its principal streets.

When the Firestone company went into Liberia, there were no roads in the country, and only one automobile. This was owned by the President of Liberia, who had very little occasion to use it because of the absence of good roads.

When Mr. Firestone arrived at the Du river plantation, he was greeted as the "Great White Chief" by many thousands of Firestone native employees who had erected a great arch of leaves and ferns at the entrance of the property and lined the road on both sides as he drove through eleven miles of the plantation to headquarters.

$5,000,000 Loan to Liberia

Mr. Harvey S. Firestone, Sr., has successfully arranged a $5,000,000 loan in America for the Liberian government. This places Liberia on a firm financial basis, and permits the development of roads, schools and public buildings. The 18 Americans comprising the Firestone technical staff are helping to organize the 2,000,000 or more native Liberians and give them remunerative employment which had not been hitherto available in their own country. The natives are proving very adaptable and willing to work in an organized way. This has made possible the clearing and planting of such a large acreage during the past year and has undoubtedly had a very appreciable effect in the recent reduction in the price of crude rubber.

European newspapers have carried many articles deriding Firestone for going into Africa to plant rubber. They claimed the soil was poor for rubber growing and that the natives would not work. The British government now realizes that Firestone's Liberian enterprise is anything but a folly.

It is conceded by everybody that Firestone has made the greatest rubber development ever accomplished by any single company in the same length of time. Liberia confronts the British and Dutch rubber growers as an increasingly important competitor. And now the British Parliament is seriously considering the question of abandoning or at least modifying the rubber restriction policy.

The British Colonies in the Middle East Have Vigorously Expressed Themselves along this line.

Ceylon has voted to abandon rubber restriction entirely. In Singapore, Straits Settlements, 47 out of 72 rubber growers have voted to abandon rubber restriction or to modify it so it would not be effective.

When Premier Baldwin brought up the question of modifying rubber restriction in the British Parliament, rubber was selling around 42 cents a pound. Within a few weeks it dropped about 18 cents a pound. Since a variation of cent a pound means a difference of over $8,000,000 a year to American rubber buyers, the decline from 42 to 24 cents a pound will mean a saving of $150,000,000 year to America if the present price is maintained.

LIME DEFICIENT IN SOW'S RATION

Cases of sows "going down the back," or becoming paralyzed in the hind legs, which frequently happens after they have farrowed and suckled a litter of pigs, have recently been connected with deficient lime utilization by the affected animals, according to W. E. Carroll, chief of swine husbandry at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. This disturbed lime balance can be produced by insufficient amounts or by improper proportions of calcium in the ration. It also will occur if the ration does not contain vitamin D, even though its calcium content may be satisfactory.

Producing a litter of pigs and the milk to feed them requires liberal amounts of lime. If this lime, along with the necessary vitamin D for its assimilation, is not supplied by the ration, the sow will suffer, for nature will provide for the safety of the offspring. This is done by the sow taking from the supplies of lime in her own body, her bones enough for the unborn pigs and sufficient to make normal milk for their nourishment after birth. When this is done, however, the reserves in the body of the sow are reduced to such an extent that her bones become weak and brittle. In this reduced condition, her bones sometimes give way under the heavy strain of the muscular pull upon them. Cases have been observed where this has resulted in the cracking of the vertebrae in the backbone. This cracked bone, then, pushes down on the spinal cord and shuts off the nerve supply to the hind quarters until the sow loses control of them.

It has been found that alfalfa hay—possibly clover and other legume hays also may be effective—and green pasture crops fed during pregnancy and lactation will prevent, at least this nutritional type of posterior paralysis. Sows that are farrowing can be protected, against this trouble by the addition to their ration of one-fourth to one-half pound of alfalfa meal or chopped alfalfa hay of good quality. Pasture, as soon as it is available, will take the place of the alfalfa. Sows so fed in the spring will be in much better condition to settle when rebred to fall litters.

Disease Same in Humans and the Lower Animals

George H. Glover of the veterinary division of Colorado Agricultural college tells of a certain African man who lost more than 20 calves from a disease known as "White Scours of Sucklings." At the same time a child in the family was quite animated for scarlet fever. It noted occurred to the dairymaid that the same principles would apply in the control of an infection in his calves and his children. Each calf, before it was a week old, contracted the disease and died. Every one of them was doped with medicine suggested by neighbors. The child was kept in strict quarantine and under the care of a physician. The simple expedient of removing every one of the pregnant cows from the infected environment a month before the calf was born would have saved his calves and controlled the infection. Most people are slow to grasp the idea that the same fundamental principles apply in every aspect of disease in the lower animals as in man.

Swine Did Well on New Supplemental Mixture

Swine feeders who attended the annual "Who-o-o-e-y day" at Iowa State college learned of a new supplemental feeding mixture composed of ten ingredients. This mixture produced gains at a cost of $4.38 per hundred pounds, as compared with $5.32 where a three-corn tankage mixture was fed. A saving of nearly $1.00 means the difference between loss and profit. The new supplement that included, in 40 parts, 30 parts of alfalfa meal, 20 pounds of peanut meal, 10 pounds of linseed oil meal, 15 pounds of alfalfa meal, 12.5 pounds of salt, 1 pound of ground limestone, 1.5 pounds of iron oxide, 100 pounds of wood ashes, .5 pound of potassium iodide, .002 pound.

The mixture was fed along with corn.

Feed for Breeding Pigs Is of Much Importance

Pigs which are to be used for breeding should be fed with great care. The self-feeder system is best for pigs being fattened for market, but it may be dangerous to follow when the object is to grow vigorous strong-boned breeding stock. Pigs being grown for breeding purposes should not be allowed to become too fat. For growth and development of strong bone, pigs must have plenty of protein, which can be furnished by tankage and dairy by-products such as skim milk or buttermilk. Keep the pigs on pasture and don't feed too much corn.

The Church Invites You

RELIGIOUS CLASSIFICATIONS

Atheism is the denial of, or disbelief in, God as a first cause or ground of the universe.

Agnosticism maintains that one cannot have any real knowledge of God.

Infidelity is a lack of belief in any accepted religion.

Skepticism doubts the statements and doctrines of revealed religion, especially of Christianity.

Christianity is the religion of Christ as a possession of men by means of a saving faith in him.

Every man belongs in one of these classes; it is in the Christianity class that more men want to be in; but it takes a saving faith to be in that class.

The church stands ready to help every man to that faith in God so fundamental in Christianity. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

JESUS PICTURES THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Jesus presented great truths in story form called parables—a plan still effective. The Kingdom of God was pictured by the story of a seed planted and bringing forth fruit, and the little mustard seed that produces a mighty surprise in the resulting large plant.

Jesus showed his power in the realm of nature and of spirit by performing miracles effecting the bodies and the souls of men. The substance and the spirit of the miracles are still wrought in the

GROWING FAME OF JESUS

Jesus simply did well his work—the souls for the souls and bodies of men; that made him famous so that great crowds followed him; he did not court popularity and begged those that were healed not to make it public.

JESUS MISUNDERSTOOD AND OPPOSED

Those who opposed Jesus planned to mislead the public by false and wicked charges against Jesus; it is so easy to say "where there is smoke there is fire" and those who will not take time to think will join in with the accusers.

1. ON WHAT BASIS SHOULD NEW PUPILS BE GRADED?

Several methods are used in different schools. But no single factor can be considered alone sufficient. Age (chronological and physical), public school grade, grading in the Church school previously attended, social and economic interests, and especially religious development and understanding (depending largely upon home training and environment) — all these factors should be recorded when the pupil is enrolled, and the pupil should then be placed in the class considered most suitable by the enrollment secretary.

2. HOW CAN WE GET THE CHILDREN IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TO STAY FOR CHURCH SERVICE?—Mary Moxey in the Sunday School Journal

says, "The first essential is to make it profitable for the children to stay. Their lack of interest is genuinely due to their inability to understand the adult service and lack of opportunity to make any contribution to it. These difficulties may be overcome by their more thorough preparation for church membership, and class meeting weekly for at least six months before their reception into membership, to learn the purpose, elements and methods of worship; and by the pastor's co-operating with the teachers to make the successive service intelligible to the children who do attend. For example, the hymns to be used on a certain Sunday may be selected by the pastor a few weeks ahead, so that the teachers may have time to explain and teach them to the children. Or the children may be drilled to sing a special hymn or to lead in a responsive reading that is appropriate for a certain Sunday service. Again, the pastor may preach an occasional children's sermon. Every sermon should contain illustrations that children can understand."

Discussion on Questions S.S. Lesson

1. What are some of the characteristics of Mark's gospel?

2. What are some of the outstanding traits of Jesus as taught in these lessons?

3. Where in the quarter's lessons are found evidences of Jesus' divinity? of his humanity?

4. How can we use these lessons as a means of promoting sincere religion?

5. What makes Jesus famous today?

6. In what respects may the many philanthropies and beneficences in the relief of mankind.

OTHER MIGHTY WORKS OF JESUS

Jesus effected an organization and followed a system and used the means at hand—even the disciples were commanded to do the impossible—feeding the multitude with very little food. It is not man's part to ask how God will do his part, but it is his part to obey orders to the full.

JESUS TEACHES SINCERITY

Jesus shows that it is the inward life that counts and not the outward ceremony. Tradition has its place in religion but it must be tested by truth and proper use.

RELIGIOUS CLASSIFICATIONS

Atheism is the denial of, or disbelief in, God as a first cause or ground of the universe.

Agnosticism maintains that one cannot have any real knowledge of God.

Infidelity is a lack of belief in any accepted religion.

Skepticism doubts the statements and doctrines of revealed religion, especially of Christianity.

Christianity is the religion of Christ as a possession of men by means of a saving faith in him.

Every man belongs in one of these classes; it is in the Christianity class that more men want to be in; but it takes a saving faith to be in that class.

The church stands ready to help every man to that faith in God so fundamental in Christianity. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

church and professing Christians improve in the task of truly representing Christ?

7. Why was it necessary for Jesus to have helpers then, and now?

Clericus says, "There is in the human heart a natural reaching out after God—as personified in John the Baptist who was in the forefront with a mighty faith in a fuller revelation of God in his son Jesus Christ; the Lord satisfies that soul-hunger for God in all those who are sincere in their desire for him."

Home Education

John A. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, says, "No man has yet succeeded who did not learn in his early years how to work and work hard to attain his object. Young men can give all sorts of reasons why, in their cases, failure is attributable to exceptional cases."

"Some will say they never had a chance." That is merest nonsense. No man ever lived who did not have a chance, and a splendid chance, if he ever got seriously to work at all."

"This splendid chance will not always lead to riches but it will build the character of a splendid man whose life makes others happier and better and better. So if a young man chooses high ideals and sets out deliberately to attain them, it hardly matters what business, what profession, what worthy pursuit, in short, he selects or circumstances choose for him, he will succeed."

TANKAGE IN PIG RATION FAVORED

Tankage in the ration of pigs being finished for market occupies a position of extreme importance according to the Kansas agricultural experiment station tests which are discussed in the Agricultural Student.

One phase of experiments conducted last summer was to determine the value of tankage as a protein supplement for fattening spring pigs on alfalfa pasture. The pigs used weighed approximately 90 pounds each and the feeding test covered a period of 115 days. One lot of these pigs was fed corn and tankage in a self-feeder and another lot was fed corn alone in a self-feeder. Both lots were run on alfalfa pasture of similar quality.

The pigs receiving no tankage gained 85 pounds per head per day; those receiving tankage, 134 pounds. The pigs receiving no tankage required 441 pounds of corn to produce 100 pounds of gain; those receiving tankage, only 380 pounds. Where no tankage was fed, the cost of grain was $6.02 per 100 pounds; but where tankage was fed, the cost was only $6.02 per hundred. The pigs fed tankage were fat and ready for market at the close of the experiment and were valued at $12.30 per 100 pounds. The pigs that received no tankage were not fat enough for market at the close of the experiment and were valued at only $12.30 per 100 pounds.

The hogs that were fed tankage returned $6.73 per head for pasture, while those receiving no tankage returned $2.22 per head for pasture consumed. In this test one pound of tankage fed free choice in a self-feeder saved 4.6 pounds of corn in producing 100 pounds of gain. In other words, at the price of corn used in this test $4 cents per bushel, a ton of tankage was worth $138.

Many Have Difficulty in Raising Good Pigs

Many farmers have difficulty in raising vigorous, healthy pigs. Hog lots that are occupied year after year without cleaning bring about unsanitary conditions.

Some of the common diseases of hogs have their beginnings within the first few weeks of the life of the pigs. That an excessive number of pigs are lost during the spring and summer months on many farms has been observed. Unlike hog cholera, when a large number of animals die within a short time, the pigs with the fifth disease often live for a much longer period. Such pigs as do survive these fifth diseases are the so-called runts and it is seldom profitable to feed them.

Minerals Are Important Nutritional Demands

Results from the use of certain minerals with live stock are so well marked that it leads us to conclude that minerals are one of the most important nutritional requirements of all animal foods. The results that occur in cattle from which common salt is withheld is one of the most striking. When salt is not given for a few months the animals become unthrifty and suffer complete breakdown.

The results with iodine are just as evident. In those regions where goitrous young are born a small amount of iodine added to the ration during the pregnancy period prevents the trouble. This enables live stock owners to secure healthy, vigorous young, where formerly the majority of their young were either born dead or died soon after birth.

LIVE STOCK HINTS

The winter ration for beef cows should consist largely of roughage.

Sweet clover is hard to cure when cut for hay and there is some danger in feeding when moldy.

The cost of raising beef calves will be determined by the cost of maintenance of the breeding herd.

Feeding calves for baby beef is becoming a common practice on many farms. This method of producing beef calls for careful feeding and management.

Yearlings and older cattle can be wintered on a cheaper class of feed than calves. The best ration for wintering these older animals is silage and leguminous hay.

To economically grow and fatten live stock with our home-grown farm grains it is essential that we supplement them with feeds containing the constituents in which these grains are lacking.

All ewes in the flock should be placed on a light grain ration about six weeks before lambing. About a half pound a day of a mixture of three-fourths oats and one-fourth corn makes a good ration.

Brood sows need exercise. They also need alfalfa in the ration. If the alfalfa is fed in a rack placed some distance from the place where the sows sleep they will get both the exercise and the alfalfa.

If a young man is thrilled to see a girl walk along the street, it may be love, or it may be a windy day.—Fostoria, O., Times.

Sickle Still in Use at Galician Harvest

A Galician peasant girl frames her bronzed face with a russet-colored handkerchief. She wears a blouse of blue percale with sleeves of checked gingham, and a gray woolen skirt. The white and blue striped apron is crumpled by the sheaf of yellow wheat clasped in her smooth brown arms.

In Galicia many of the men emigrate to find employment, and the women carry on the work of the four seasons. The fields are small; the farming methods are the methods of the Homeric age. The red earth is turned in shallow furrows with wooden plows drawn by hiscult-colored oxen.

The seed is scattered by hand, and the soil is cultivated with wooden harrows. In June the grain is ripe, and the peasant girl goes into the field with her sickle.

The harvester bends low; in the left arm she gathers a cluster of grain stalks; with the sickle in her right hand she cuts a swift stroke near the roots. Catching the severed grain in the curve of the sickle, she raises it above her head and waves it in a circular movement; then, pivoting on her hips, she lays the sheaf on the ground behind her. In tireless rhythm she moves across the rows of grain.

A boy follows in the field, tying the sheaves with straws.—Exchange.

Liked Old Costumes but Stuck to Modern

Looking at some pictures of Ireland, old and new, a friend remarked the other day that men on the streets of Dublin looked like men on the streets of New Bedford, and pointed regretfully to the posed picture of the typical Irish countryman of an older day, with his breeches and his characteristic hat and stick.

"What pity they haven't stuck to the old costumes," "Well," I said, "they haven't; but if you are stuck on that rig there is nothing on earth to prevent you wearing one like it." He said that was different. "Doubtless," I went on, "you admire the Hungarian women in their quaint old-style dress." He said he did. "Do you want your wife to dress that way?" But he said that, too, was different. "If you are so strong for the old and the picturesque," I persisted, "you might wear silk knee breeches and stockings and a gill-buttoned coat and an elaborate starched, ruffled collar and a three-pointed hat, just like your Revolutionary forbears." But it was no use. I couldn't interest him in wearing old clothes, and he wouldn't think of cooking his meat in an open fireplace, preferring the standardized, dull, stupid gas stove with hot-water attachment.—C. G., in New Bedford Standard.

Tides of the Earth

Because it is by no means rigid, our earth's crust rises and falls like the ocean's tide under the gravitational attraction of the moon and sun. There is no doubt that this occurs, says Dr. Walter D. Lambert of the United States coast and geodetic survey, though difficulties have so far prevented exact measurement.

Another thing that makes the crust of the earth heave and fall, says Doctor Lambert, is the pressure exerted upon it in spots by the rising tide of the ocean. Atlantic tides have caused an observed earth bulge at Williams Bay, Wis., 800 miles away, and it is thought probable that this influence girdles the earth.

Great Actress' Prank

Sarah Bernhardt, generally credited with never having laughed or joked while on the stage, is said to have played a prank on an actress, presumably Mrs. Patrick Campbell, in retaliation for a joke the latter had played on her. There was a scene wherein she had to grasp the hands of Mrs. Campbell, to help her over the rock. The astonished Mrs. Campbell discovered that the "Divine Sarah" carried a raw egg and left it crushed in Mrs. Campbell's hands, but went on with the scene as if nothing had happened.

Unique Religious Rite

A devout Buddhist, Doctor Imazo, of Osaka, Japan, held a mass for the souls of the flies whose death he had caused by a deadly fly poison he invented. He invited priests, newspaper men and friends to the ceremony and read a funeral scroll, asking the pardon of the flies. Priests chanted the funeral mass and the assembled mourners joined in prayers for the repose of the flies' souls. After the ceremony Doctor Imazo paid the priests liberally and invited the mourners to an elaborate dinner.

Short but Sweet

Prince Arthur of Connaught tells an amusing tale of his experiences when serving as governor general of South Africa. He had made a journey up the Zambesi to some of the paramount chiefs. One of them made a speech of welcome which took three-quarters of an hour to deliver. When he had finished a native interpreter came forward to explain the oration. Pointing to the chief, the interpreter discharged his task with a single sentence: "Him say him 'am pleased to see you.'"—Grit.

LIVE STOCK

SUNSHINE CUTS COST OF PORK

In the swine feeding tests at the Iowa experiment station one of the important observations made was the effect of sunlight on nutrition. Those pigs that were fed out in the open so they got plenty of sunlight made about the same daily gain as the ones fed inside. But they did it more economically and on less feed.

The pigs fed inside required an average of 425 pounds of feed for each hundred pounds gain to reach a weight of 225 pounds, while those fed out in the sunlight reached the same weight, with only 391 pounds of feed for each hundred pounds increased weight. The outside fed pigs made $1.02 more per head over and above feed costs than did those fed inside.

Mr. Eyaard, who was in charge of the experiments, thinks that sunshine was responsible for the difference. He is convinced of this because of the fact that the outside fed pigs did not do nearly so well during the early part of the feeding season, when the days were short and cold. On the other hand, after the days became longer and more mild, there was a marked improvement in their gains.

During the early part of the feeding season it took about 10 pounds less feed per hundred pounds gain for the outside fed pigs, but at the close, when the days were longer, these pigs ate about 70 pounds less feed for each 100 pounds gain than did those fed inside.

The conclusion drawn is that probably in midwinter, during the short days and severe weather, it is well to feed pigs inside. When this is done, however, they should, by all means, have alfalfa hay as a source of vitamin D to take the place of the sun's rays, and to aid in assimilating minerals. As soon as the days lengthen and the weather becomes more mild, the pigs should be given their feed outside.

Feeding Baby Bees to Make Good Finish

The standard baby beef ration is five to ten pounds per head daily of clover or alfalfa hay, ten or twelve pounds of corn and one or two pounds of linseed oil meal. A few pounds of oats can be substituted for part of the corn in the ration, but with prices as they generally prevail it seems as though cheaper results are usually obtained with straight corn. Cottonseed meal can be substituted for the linseed oil meal, but unless the cottonseed meal is $10 a ton cheaper, it seems as though the linseed oil meal has a slight advantage. If neither, clover nor alfalfa hay is available, it usually pays to buy enough so that at least two pounds of leguminous hay can be fed per head daily. The calves can be started out on only four or five pounds of corn per head daily, but it is well to increase the ration as fast as the appetite permits until they are on full feed.

Cod Liver Products of Some Value to Swine

Does it pay to feed cod liver oil or cod liver meal to all pigs in dry lot receiving a good basal ration of yellow corn, 60 per cent protein meat meal tankage and simple mineral mixtures?

Tests at the Iowa experiment station showed that high-grade cod liver oil has a nutritional value. For market hogs properly fed the added expense of the cod liver products is not justified, thinks John M. Eyaard. The man who has pure breeds he is sitting for shows is in a much better position to make a profit from such materials. Further tests will be made, using other basal rations.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Experimental work in England has shown that iron is very necessary for young swine.

Proper care and management to insure a good calf crop will increase profits from beef cattle raising.

Alfalfa gives us one of our most valuable hays, but because of danger of bloat is not a safe pasture except for hogs and horses.

Opinion among hog breeders is pretty evenly divided between the A-type and the gable roof type of individual hoghouse, while still others favor the small shed-roof type.

Alfalfa hay is excellent for breeding cattle and sheep. It has proven at one and the same time to be the most palatable, the most productive and most permanent type of pasture for hogs.

Are you making plans now for good hog pastures next summer and fall? Alfalfa is conceded to be the best pasture. Next comes sweet and red clover, rape and mixtures of rape, oats and sweet clover.

Tankage is not absolutely necessary for hogs when they have free access to alfalfa or sweet clover, but the gains will be faster with the tankage and ordinarily it pays to feed at least one-fourth of a pound of tankage per head daily.

While the knowledge of what minerals are needed and the amount required is very meager, we do know that additional calcium, phosphorus, sodium and iodine are very essential in the rations of most herds in most sections of the country.

Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., Sends First Message From Liberia To Rubber Company's Own Station In Akron—Daily Reports On Rubber Growth To Follow

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., now in the African jungles, today broadcasted the first message sent from the special radio station recently erected on the Firestone rubber plantation in the interior of Liberia, on the West Coast of Africa. The message was received at a similar station on the roof of the Firestone factories at Akron, Ohio.

This marks a new era of communication with the interior of inaccessible countries. Heretofore, the method used was to send foot messengers through jungle trails, taking days to get in touch with the outside world. Broadcasting by radio direct from one continent to another thus gives the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. a great advantage in developing its million acres of rubber lands that were secured from the Liberian government. Although these properties are located over 5,000 miles from the Firestone headquarters at Akron, Ohio, it will now be possible to send reports every day by radio from the Liberian plantations to Akron.

100,000 Acres Laid Out

Mr. Firestone, Jr., has been in Liberia since early January. In his first report by radio today, he said that the Liberian government officials were enthusiastically co-operating with Firestone in the company's great undertaking to make Liberia one of the important rubber-growing countries of the world. Mr. Firestone said that during the first year two 50,000-acre plantations had been laid out on the Du river and the other 150 miles south of the Du on the Cavalla river.

Firestone engineers in the same time had constructed over 75 miles of roads and had built and established headquarters on the two plantations, with housing facilities for the resident staffs of 118 Americans. Power plants for the development of electric power, light and refrigeration had been built, as well as hospitals and trade stores for the benefit of the Americans and also to supply the needs of the 15,000 natives who are employed in clearing the jungles and planting rubber trees.

1,500,000 Trees Planted

During the past year, according to Mr. Firestone's first radio report, over 1,500,000 rubber trees have been planted on a total of over 15,000 acres of cleared jungle lands. This is a record in rubber plantation work. It is the largest number of trees set out and acres planted by any single company in the same length of time. And Mr. Firestone stated that the rate of progress in clearing land and planting rubber trees "is being constantly increased."

Mr. Firestone reported that the steamship sent over for service had been placed in commission along the Liberian coast and is now linking up the Firestone plantations and the coast towns of Liberia. He expressed the hope that Firestone will soon have its own vessels operating directly between New York and Liberia, making the Atlantic passage in less than two weeks. When this is done, it will not only give Firestone an advantage of from two to five weeks in time as compared with other rubber-growing countries, but will also greatly reduce the cost of transportation.

Teach Natives Trades

Great progress in the development of the Firestone trade schools was also reported. Mr. Firestone said that the natives were very anxious to learn under the instruction of the Firestone technical staff. The dark-skinned Liberians are being taught to be carpenters, blacksmiths, plumbers, electricians, automobile mechanics, sanitary engineers, soil experts and foresters.

Inquiry Jinx Strikes Dartmouth's Captain Of Football Squad

HANOVER, N. H., March 23 — (INS)—The injury jinx that nearly always strikes down football captains has hit Dartmouth early. Usually the jinx does not arrive until the football seasons opens.

Dick Black, Illinois boy who will captain the Big Green on the gridiron next fall, is confined to the college infirmary as a result of an operation on his knee. There is a bad muscle sprain under the knee cap, with possible water of knee, and at the present time, it is doubtful if Black will compete for Dartmouth again in any sport.

Dick was forced to abandon football last fall, just at the time, when his smashing line thrusts were most needed by the Hawley coached eleven. This winter he had to forego hurdling with its many trips from Hanover to New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

gineers, soil experts and foresters.

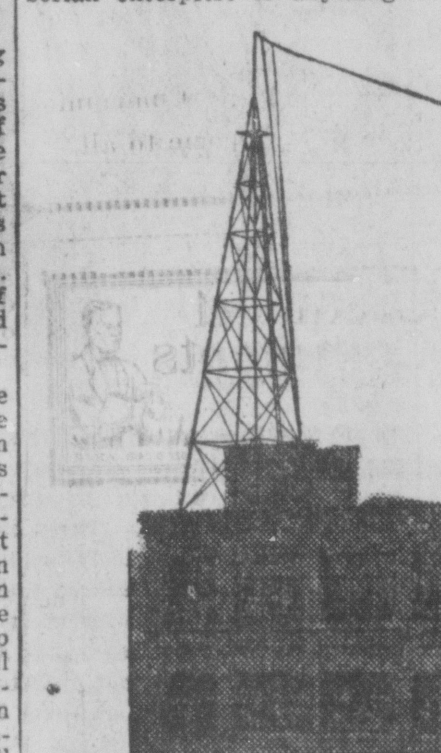

Now that the Liberians, for the first time in the history of the country, have a system of good roads, they are suddenly becoming enthusiastic about motor transportation, and they all want to ride in automobiles, trucks or tractors. As a result, Monrovia, the capital of Liberia, has established a traffic squad to police the traffic on its principal streets. When the Firestone company went into Liberia, there were no roads in the country, and only one automobile. This was owned by the President of Liberia, who had very little occasion to use it because of the absence of good roads.

When Mr. Firestone arrived at the Du river plantation, he was greeted as the "Great White Chief" by many thousands of Firestone native employees who had erected a great arch of leaves and ferns at the entrance of the property and lined the road on both sides as he drove through eleven miles of the plantation to headquarters.

$5,000,000 Loan to Liberia

Mr. Harvey S. Firestone, Sr., has successfully arranged a $5,000,000 loan in America for the Liberian government. This places Liberia on a firm financial basis, and permits the development of roads, schools and public buildings. The 118 Americans comprising the Firestone technical staff are helping to organize the 2,000,000 or more native Liberians and give them remunerative employment which had not been hitherto available in their own country. The natives are proving very adaptable and willing to work in an organized way. This has made possible the clearing and planting of such a large acreage during the past year and has undoubtedly had a very appreciable effect in the recent reduction in the price of crude rubber.

European newspapers have carried many articles deriding Firestone for going into Africa to plant rubber. They claimed the soil was poor for rubber growing and that the natives would not work. The British government now realizes that Firestone's Liberian enterprise is anything but a folly. It is conceded by everybody that Firestone has made the greatest rubber development ever accomplished by any single company in the same length of time. Liberia confronts the British and Dutch rubber growers as an increasingly important competitor. And now the British Parliament is seriously considering the question of abandoning rubber restriction or at least modifying the rubber restriction policy.

The British colonies in the Middle East have vigorously expressed themselves along this line. Ceylon has voted to abandon rubber restriction entirely. In Singapore, Straits Settlements, 47 out of 72 rubber growers have voted to abandon rubber restriction or to modify it so it would not be effective.

When Premier Baldwin brought up the question of modifying rubber restriction in the British Parliament, rubber was selling around 42 cents a pound. Within a few weeks it dropped about 18 cents a pound. Since a variation of cent a pound means a difference of over $8,000,000 a year to American rubber buyers, the decline from 42 to 24 cents a pound means a saving of $150,000,000 a year to America if the present price is maintained.

LIME DEFICIENT IN SOW'S RATION

Cases of sows "going down in the back," or becoming paralyzed in the hind legs, which frequently happens after they have farrowed and suckled a litter of pigs, have recently been connected with deficient lime utilization by the affected animals, according to W. E. Carroll, chief of swine husbandry at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. This disturbed balance can be produced by insufficient amounts of or by improper proportions of calcium in the ration. It also will occur if the ration does not contain vitamin D, even though its calcium content may be satisfactory.

Producing a litter of pigs and the milk to feed them requires liberal amounts of lime. If this lime, along with the necessary vitamin D for its assimilation, is not supplied by the ration, the sow will suffer, for nature will provide for the safety of the offspring. This is done by the sow taking care of the supplies of lime in her own body, her bones, enough for the unborn pigs and sufficient to make normal milk for their nourishment after birth. When this is done, however, the reserves in the body of the sow are reduced to such an extent that her bones become weak and brittle. In this reduced condition, her bones sometimes give way under the heavy strain of the muscular pull upon them. Cases have resulted in the cracking of one of the vertebrae of the backbone. This cracked bone then pushes down on the spinal cord and shuts off the nerve supply to the hind quarters until the sow loses control of them.

It has been found that alfalfa hay—possibly clover and other legume hays also may be effective—and green pasture crops fed during pregnancy and lactation will prevent, at least this nutritional type of posterior paralysis. Sows that are farrowing can be protected against this trouble by the addition to their rations of one-fourth to one-half pound of alfalfa meal or chopped alfalfa hay of good quality. Pasture, as soon as it is available, will take the place of the alfalfa. Sows so fed in the spring will be in much better condition to settle when rebred to fall litters.

Disease Same in Humans and the Lower Animals

George H. Glover of the veterinary division of Colorado Agricultural college tells of a certain dairyman who lost more than 20 calves from a disease known as "White Scours of Sucklings." At the same time a child in the family was quarantined for scarlet fever. It never occurred to the dairyman that the same principles would apply in the control of an infection in his calves and his children. Each calf, before it was a week old, contracted the disease and died. Every one of them was doped with useless nostrums suggested by neighbors. The child was kept in strict quarantine and under the care of a physician. The simple expedient of removing every one of the pregnant cows from the infected environment a month before the calf was born would have saved his calves and controlled the infection. Most people are slow to grasp the idea that the same fundamental principles apply in every aspect of disease in the lower animals as in man.

Swine Did Well on New Supplemental Mixture

Swine feeders who attended the annual "Whoo-o-o-ey day" at Iowa State college learned of a new supplemental feeding mixture composed of ten ingredients. This mixture produced gains at a cost of $4.58 per hundred pounds, as compared with $5.52 where a three-cornered linseed-oil meal, alfalfa meal, tankage mixture was fed. A saving of nearly $1 often means the difference between loss and profit.

The new supplement that showed up so well was made up as follows: Tankage, 40 pounds; cottonseed meal, 20 pounds; peanut meal, 9 pounds; linseed-oil meal, 15 pounds; alfalfa meal, 12.5 pounds; salt, 1 pound; ground limestone, 1.5 pounds; iron oxide, .198 pound; wood ashes, .5 pound; potassium iodide, .002 pound.

The mixture was fed along with corn.

Feed for Breeding Pigs Is of Much Importance

Pigs which are to be used for breeding should be fed with great care. The self-feeder system is fine for pigs being fattened for market, but it may be dangerous to follow when the object is to grow vigorous strong-boned breeding stock. Pigs being grown for breeding purposes should not be allowed to become too fat. For growth and development of strong bone, pigs must have plenty of protein, which can be furnished by tankage and dairy by-products such as skim milk, or buttermilk. Keep the pigs on pasture and don't feed too much corn.

Hog House Floor

There is much difference of opinion as to the best floors for hog houses. So far as ease of keeping clean combined with cheapness and long life are concerned, probably nothing can compare with concrete, and if it is given a rough float finish it is not slippery. However, the concrete floor is apt to be rather chilling. The ideal floor would be a concrete base with a cork, brick or pressure creosoted wood block upper layer, but this type is more expensive.

DERE MOM

Circleville, O., March 25, 1928.

Dere Mom:

Love is blind, ain't it? I found it out long ago but I guess I never really realized it. I bought a girl some candy and she said thank'e but my hands were so dirty that she couldn't eat the candy. My but that made me sore mom.

I was ast to a party agin, these things is gettin' to be a bore, and they gave us all little teeny-weeny glasses of grape juice. They said it had been in the family since 1880. I sez to meself it surely is small for its age. I didn't tell them that but I thot it mitey hard.

Mom, I room with Ezekiel now. er no mom he is always borin money from me so one nite while he was asleep I went through his pockets and he woke up while I was doin' it an sez, "Hey there thet money belongs to me." and nite quick I sez, "Well it won't be long now." Warent that brite. I got the money mom cause I'm stronger than Ezekiel.

Mom I read the other day where a song writer collected .50 thousand $ for the loss of a finger. It was one he played with. I thot that were funny so I ast me teacher about it an she sed not to ast so many questions but really mom jst between you an me, nobody else. I don't think that there teacher knowed herself.

Where I stay mom they has a radio an the other note I was listenin' in an I thot I was hearin' a thot but mom I was sorta disappointed cause it was only the same gink singin' in two apartments.

Mom I never kin see why some of these there gals; here are so high-futin'. One come up to me the other day an sez she won a prize on her essay on The Influence of Science on the Principals of Government. I tole her well that was rite nice but she oughter aence she's got her mind offa that study The Influence of the Vacuum Cleaner on the Carpet. She ain't spoke at me sence.

Mom I think I'll have to get a noo over-coat, not thet theres anything wrong with this one but I can't pay for it. I'm glad summers come in.

They was astin us de-fen-i-tions and I was ast to tell what a bachelor was. I tole 'em the nearest I could come to it was that it was a man who looks before he leaps and then he doesn't leap. The teacher sed that was purty good. Ain't you proud of your little sunlight? Mom, I was supposed to use the word dimension in a sentence an I sez, "Dimension me in his last letter? that was brite too.

I went into a rest-a-rant the other day an mom I found a fly in my ice cream and I called the waiter an tole him an he sed let im-per-lite-ent cause he sed let him freeze and teach him a lesson. I was awful mad.

Mom some girl who that she was smart ast me if I ever fell in love with words. She thot that I was dumb but I tole her yes especially when I got a letter from you that sed Enclosed find check. She sez to me sez she O you don't know-prec-tend you do? I tole her I gae not and let it go at that.

My landlady gimme a chicken dinner on Sunday as she ast me if it wasn't rotten but I didn't want to hurt her feelin's by telling her rite so I sez The chicken may have been good morally but physically it is a wreck. U no mom Ezekiel has a friend who was educated at Eton an Oxford an he sure thinks he's it. He's always blawin to me about it an one day I'd jst hed enuf and I tole him warent it possible to sue them? All he sed was ig-no-ra-mus.

Mom I must close with this here yarn I ware in geometry thotter day an we was havin' bout parallel lines an how they couldn't meet. I tole the teacher it was jst like a story I heard that an ole man had a parallel stroke on the ole man an woman had a berd time makin' ends meet. She tole me that wasn't the same idea. Sweetly and lufely yurs.

THE SWIMMING MATCHES

Three matches were dropped into the river and started floating downstream.

"Goodness, look how we can swim," they all commented to each other. They thought no one could surpass them in the art of swimming.

Soon a duck swam swiftly and gracefully by and later a fish darted past, with a boat following in their wake.

The matches still undaunted felt they were ahead but they were only in the place where the wind and ripples had blown them.

Are you like the matches? Do you go along in a turmoil somebody else has started and do you think you are going on by your own efforts? When everything is calm do you find you are just where the ripples and wind have taken you?

No one can swim for us. Each man must do his own work. Nothing can be achieved by another's efforts. Let us meet our own problems and solve them the best we can.

JUNIOR GIRLS LOSE

The freshmen girls won from the junior girls by 4 points Tuesday evening. The game was one sided in the first half. The juniors started in the last half when Kuhns made two baskets in a row. Dade was high scorer of the game having eleven points to her credit. Kuhns with high score of the juniors with six points to her credit. The freshmen girls are winning because of their good team work and efficient coaching.

The dinner bridge Friday night at 6:30 o'clock at the home of Miss Dorothy McArthur, was a very delightful social affair. There were twenty guests present, who were seated at small tables. Vases of pink sweet peas were tastefully used for decorations throughout the house. At the end of five frames of bridge, the favors for high score were awarded to Mrs. Harry Heffner and Mrs. Ruth McDonald.

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE HAPPINESS—Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding.—Prov. 3:13.

PRAYER—Happy are they whose God is Jehovah.

A Daniel Comes to Judgment.

It is so unusual to read in the British press "knocks" about the movies because of American predominance in the business, that it comes as a relief to hear what J. A. R. Cairns has to say.

Mr. Cairns happens to be the magistrate who presides over the police court in the meanest part of London. Before him comes all the sordid and sorry tragedies of London's great east end. Not long ago, in an address in the wealthy and fur-trimmed west end, he said:

"The Church has lost its hold upon the people of Drab Street. It has failed in preaching sermons. It is the human story told in the human way, of virtue and goodness triumphing over vice and filth, that will make for good. I am certain the cinema is the greatest civilizing factor among us. Childhood is introduced into a world of harmonies and beauty, and adolescence and middle age have consolations and vistas of a bigger world than that of work and toil."

If a girl pays $2.00 for a pair of stockings, she can hardly be blamed for wanting to show $1.95 worth of them.—Fostoria, O., Daily Times.

Potent Drink.

This department is not given to home-brew recipes, but here is something it seems legitimate to mention as a horrible example.

Lynn, Mass., reports the discovery of a new drink. Citizens have been discovered mixing cocktails whose ingredients were seidlitz powders, paregoric and ginger ale. Its potency is well vouched for. A few consecutive cocktails of this brand have been known to produce "sleep lasting 19 hours."

Increase the proportion of paregoric a little, and the sleep may be eternal. The basis of paregoric is opium. Therefore druggists are very properly making it harder to buy than formerly.

Long, Hard Road.

A news picture shows Nick Quanaidwalu, a Hopi Indian entrant in the marathon race from Los Angeles to New York, sitting dolefully on the roadside while trainers rub his weary legs and anoint his sore feet. It is a sad spectacle.

The asphalt and concrete highways are said to be devastating to paleface marathoners as well as aborigines. Hard pavements are not suited to the human foot. For that matter, they were never very well suited to horse's feet. Nowadays horses are having dirt bridle paths made for them.

Why treat horses better than men? This race shows more clearly than usual the need of foot-paths of cinder or gravel along highways, for pedestrians.

When Taxes Shrink.

The bigger income tax a citizen has to pay, the more he hollers. It doesn't sooth him much to reflect that when his tax is big, he has the money to pay it with—or at least, had the money.

When income shrinks, for any reason, there comes a recompense and a revelation. Making out his income tax report this month, many a citizen, finding he had little or no tax to pay, had it borne in on him for the first time that the income tax is the fairest of all taxes.

DESIRES

HE lives to Learn
Who lives to Spurn
The things he should
Not own—
So hesitate
If you'd be great
Though you
Must walk alone,
Along the road
And bear your load
That is part
Of the plan,
Don't be a slave
To things you crave
And you will
Be
A man,
A man true-born
Though
Others scorn
Your goal
Is still in Sight,
And while they Talk
Your feet will Walk
Along the paths
Of right—

And what we mean to say
Is,
The qualities
And mysteries
Of Life
Are manifold,
And every measure
Of real
Treasure
Cannot to you
Unfold
Until you learn
Desires to Spurn
Though sad,
Decide to smile,
And this is True
There'll come to
You
The things that Are Worth-while.

THE JAZZ SINGER

NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS

Cantor Rabinowitz, who has trained his son, Jakie, to be a Cantor, finds the boy singing ragtime in a "beer garden." He whips the child and Jakie runs away. Ten years elapse. Jakie, now Jack Robin, obtains a job singing jazz through Mary Dale, a dancer. Mary returns to New York to star in a musical comedy and gets Jack a part in the show. Jack returns home, but when the Cantor learns that he is a jazz singer he drives him out. Dillings, the backer of the show, is jealous of Mary's interest in Jack. Jack and Mary discuss the show between "hearsals."

"Jack! Snap out of it! You're going to be the hit of the show. You're just a bit tired, now, that's all that's the matter with you. Why, we're all going to be so proud of you." She reached across the table and patted his hand.

"No, there'll be some people who won't," he shook his head sadly, but he clung to the girl's hand as though he never wanted to let it go.

"You mean your family? You've never spoken of them, so I—I rather imagined you had quarreled."

"Yes, you see they wanted me to be something entirely different. To them the stage is just the same as jail. I'm an only son, and—well, they don't think I'll ever amount to anything."

"My dear boy, that's an old, old story. Don't you know that there are millions of people who feel that same way about the theatre. And

"It looks as though it's going to be your show, Jack!"

as for parents—Jack, there is nothing more selfish than the way in which parents attempt to direct their children's lives. They call it love—but it's a purely selfish wish to see in their children a recreation of what they, themselves might have been or would like to be. My father and mother objected to my career—but they got over it. And now they're proud of me. Forget all this, Jack. You're going to be a great success."

"Mary, do you—do you really think so? You're so wonderful!" He leaned across the table and gazed into Mary's eyes. "If I am a success, Mary, there's something I'd like to tell you."

"Well, what until then? It's a whole week off." Mary's face was upturned; her red lips were close to his; never before had she seemed so tremendously desirable; so irresistible. There was that funny little turn-up to her nose; that amazing quirk of the eyebrows that seemed always to give her an expression of surprise; and that adorable curve to her sensitive mouth. Jack had to speak.

"I—I suppose you think I'm out of my head," he blundered, "but—my head? I'm crazy about you, Mary. I was going to wait until I knew where I stood before I spoke, but I couldn't help it. You look so beautiful—you're so sweet."

"But I'm crazy about you, Jack," Mary looked directly and sincerely at the man across the table from her.

"Mary! You don't understand—you don't know what I mean," Jack was floundering in his amazement.

"Well, what do you mean?" Mary smiled.

"I mean that I love you—I want to marry you—some day."

"That's what I thought you meant, Jack."

"Mary!"

A dark shadow came between them. "The parlour is the app—"

New York Church Soon To Get Largest Tuned Bell Ever Erected

The bell weighs 25 tons, and is tuned to a deep "C". It will be dismantled and taken through the streets by night to the docks for shipment to New York. There it will be re-erected, in the tower of the Riverside church, 300 feet

Another week of grilling work wherein Mary and Jack had little time either for themselves or for their new-found happiness. Several numbers were added at the last moment; old sketches were relegated to limbo. Day in and day out, night after night in the theatre going over and over again the same lines, the same songs, the same dances. Everyone was tired; tempers were running on the ragged edges; one of the chorus girls had sprained an ankle and someone to fill her place had to be recruited and trained in double-quick time. Opening "cold" on Broadway, the mechanism must be made to run smoothly for the delectation of the critical and temperamental first-nighters without an out-of-town try-out.

Lee had sent everyone home in the early hours of the morning with strict injunctions to appear at two o'clock the following afternoon to run through a final dress rehearsal before the opening that night. Now with feverish activity the stage hands were shifting scenery, getting it into proper placement for quick changes, hanging drops and trying them. Electricians, their hands full of tools, wires and bulbs, were putting down the lights up and down, experimenting with color effects, timing the various degrees of luminosity for each sketch. The wardrobe mistress rushed from one dressing room to another taking last-minute stitches in costumes.

In the midst of the chaos Lee was calling loudly for the participants in the Dixie sketch.

"Come on, everybody," he was shouting. "Mary—Jack, we've got to run through this scene before dress rehearsal. I think we'll make some changes. No chorus, only the principals. This is our last chance, now, so get it right."

The little group took their places, some already in costume, others still in their street clothes.

"Come on, Gene, take it from 'Gus, where've you been.' Lee directed the stage manager-detective.

"Gus, where've you been?" began the detective, picking up his line.

"Boy, I been following" that swallow, an' the last I seen of it, it was headin' due south," Jack took his cue.

"But swallows don't go south this time of year," Carter stepped forward on his line.

"Heh! They suitin' dose when this black boy's tippin' in!" Jack answered.

"Now, that's the cue for my 'Cotton Gin' number, Mr. Lee. Do you want me to take it without the chorus?" Carter asked.

"No, that's one reason I wanted you over this scene," Lee began. "I've been thinking about it, and I've decided that Jack had better do that number."

"But, Mr. Lee," Carter objected, his professional pride asserting itself, "that's where I do my specialty. It's the best number I have."

"Sorry, Carter," Lee tried to smooth over matters, "but I want this done as a real snappy Southern skit."

"Well, Mr. Lee, I've got enough numbers now," Jack interrupted nervously, "and Carter's had all the rehearsals on it."

"That's all right. You know the song. You can carry another number all right. Now, I want it done like this," Lee was hurrying along the scene without further ado.

"Stand back, all of you, Jack, you're down front here. The principals moved toward the rear of the stage and Jack took his position in front of the footlights beside Lee.

"Look, this is a big number," he spoke quietly to Jack. "I want to get everything out of it that's in it. You can do it. That's why I'm giving you this chance. You're not nervous about it, are you?"

"No-o-o," Jack confessed.

"All right, then. I'm going to have nothing downstage here but the spot on you. It will be your number if you carry it through the way you're doing this other stuff. You don't need to take it now. But you understand what I want?"

"Yes, I see, Mr. Lee."

"Jack, that's going to be wonderful!" Mary watching from the wings, now moved up beside Jack as Lee began giving directions to the others. "It looks very much as though it's going to be your show. Harry's giving you everything."

"I know it, Mary, and it almost gets me scared," Jack admitted. "I swear, I lay awake having nightmares about it. Suppose I didn't get over."

"No fear, Jack," Mary laughed, and slipped her hand inside Jack's. "You're going to be the whole show. Harry knows what he's doing."

Yet right at that moment Jack was not his own feelings that much as with the nervousness that is pegged war to almost every actor on an opening night.

DAUGHTER NAMED FATHER'S PARTNER

LONDON, March 24—(UP)—England's first business designation of "—And Daughter, Limited," was officially registered here recently.

The registration was that of a general provision business, which though working with only a small capital, has assumed the imposing title of H. Marment And Daughter, Ltd. It is understood that the girl's father registered the title as a tribute to the way his daughter conducted the business for him during the war.

The daughter is named as governing director and chairman of the company.

Persia Closes Schools That Teach Holy Bible

TEHERAN, March 24—(INS)—The American Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions Schools have been closed by order of the Persian government because they disregarded an order of the Ministry of Public Instruction of nearly a year ago, not to teach the Bible but give increasing prominence in their curriculum to the Koran.

The English Church Missionary society as well as the American schools, which have establishments in various towns throughout Persia, are affected by this order.

As far as is known neither the American nor British legations took action.

It is so unusual to read in the British press "knocks" about the movies because of American predominance in the business, that it comes as a relief to hear what J. A. R. Cairns has to say.

Mr. Cairns happens to be the magistrate who presides over the police court in the meanest part of London. Before him comes all the sordid and sorry tragedies of London's great east end. Not long ago, in an address in the wealthy and fur-trimmed west end, he said:

"The Church has lost its hold upon the people of Drab Street. It has failed in preaching sermons. It is the human story told in the human way, of virtue and goodness triumphing over vice and filth, that will make for good. I am certain the cinema is the greatest civilizing factor among us. Childhood is introduced into a world of harmonies and beauty, and adolescence and middle age have consolations and vistas of a bigger world than that of work and toil."

If a girl pays $2.00 for a pair of stockings, she can hardly be blamed for wanting to show $1.95 worth of them.—Fosteria, O., Daily Times.

Potent Drink.

This department is not given to home-brew recipes, but here is something it seems legitimate to mention as a horrible example.

Lynn Mass. reports the discovery of a new drink. Citizens have been discovered mixing cocktails whose ingredients were selditz powders, paregoric and ginger ale. Its potency is well vouched for. A few consecutive cocktails of this brand have been known to produce "sleep lasting 19 hours."

Increase the proportion of paregoric a little, and the sleep may be eternal. The basis of paregoric is opium. Therefore, druggists are very properly making it harder to buy than formerly.

Long, Hard Road.

A news picture shows Nick Quasawainu, a Hopi Indian entrant in the marathon race from Los Angeles to New York, sitting doleful on the roadside while trainers, rub his weary legs and anoint his sore feet. It is a sad spectacle.

The asphalt and concrete highways are said to be devastating to paleface marathoners as well as aborigines. Hard pavements are not suited to the human foot. For that matter, they were never very well suited to horse's feet. Nowadays horses are having dirt bridle paths made for them.

Why treat horses better than men? This race shows more clearly than usual the need of foot-paths of cinder or gravel along highways, for pedestrians.

When Taxes Shrink.

The bigger income tax a citizen has to pay, the more he hollers. It doesn't soothe him much to reflect that when his tax is big, he has the money to pay it with—or at least, had the money.

When income shrinks, for any reason, there comes a recompense and a revelation. Making out his income tax report this month, many a citizen, finding he had little or no tax to pay, had it borne in on him for the first time that the income tax is the fairest of all taxes.

THE JAZZ SINGER

NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE BE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"THE JAZZ SINGER" starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. picture-ization of this novel. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS

Cantor Rabinowitz, who has trained his son, Jakie, to be a Cantor, finds the boy singing ragtime in a "beer garden." He whips the child and Jakie runs away. Ten years elapse. Jakie, now Jack Robin, is a job singing jazz through Vary Dale, a dancer. Mary returns to New York to star in a musical comedy and gets Jack a part in the show. Jack returns home, but when he Cantor learns that he is a jazz singer he drives him out. Dittings, the backer of the show, is jealous of Mary's interest in Jack. Jack and Mary discuss the show between rehearsals.

"Jack! Snap out of it! You're going to be the hit of the show. You're just a bit tired, now, that's all that's the matter with you. Why, we're all going to be so proud of you." She reached across the table and patted his hand.

"No, there'll be some people who won't," he shook his head sadly, but he clung to the girl's hand as though he never wanted to let it go.

"You mean your family? You've never spoken of them, so I—I rather imagined you had quarreled."

"Yes, you see they wanted me to be something entirely different. To them the stage is just the same as jail. I'm an only son, and—well, they don't think I'll ever amount to anything."

"My dear boy, that's an old, old story. Don't you know that there are millions of people who feel that same way about the theatre. And as for parents—Jack, there is nothing more selfish than the way in which parents attempt to direct their children's lives. They call it love—but it's a purely selfish wish to see in their children a recreation of what they, themselves might have been or would like to be. My father and mother objected to my career—but they got over it. And now they're proud of me. Forget all this, Jack. You're going to be a great success."

"It looks as though he's going to be your show, Jack!"

"Mary, do you—do you really think so? You're so wonderful. He leaned across the table and gazed into Mary's eyes. "If I am a success, Mary, there's something I'd like to tell you."

"Well, why wait until then? It's a whole week off."

Mary's face was upturned; her red lips were close to his; never before had she seemed so tremendously desirable; so irresistible. There was that funny little turn-up to her nose; that amazing quirk of the eyebrows that seemed always to give her an expression of surprise; and that adorable curve to her sensitive mouth. Jack had to speak.

"I—I suppose you think I'm out of my head," he blundered, "but—but I'm crazy about you, Mary. I was going to wait until I knew where I stood before I spoke, but I couldn't help it. You look so beautiful—you're so sweet."

"But I'm crazy about you, Jack." Mary looked directly and sincerely at the man across the table from her.

Mary: "You don't understand—I don't know what I mean." Jack blundering in his amazement. Well, what do you mean?

Mary: "You—I want you—I want you—I want you."

Mary: "You don't understand—I don't know what I mean." Jack blundering in his amazement. Well, what do you mean?

CHAPTER XIII

Another week of grilling work wherein Mary and Jack had little time either for themselves or for their new-found happiness. Several numbers were added at the last moment; old sketches were relegated to limbo. Day in and day out, night after night in the theatre going over and over again the same lines, the same songs, the same dances. Everyone was tired; tempers were running on the ragged edges; one of the chorus girls had sprained an ankle and someone to fill her place had to be recruited and trained in double-quick time. Opening "cold" on Broadway, the mechanism must be made to run smoothly for the delectation of the critical and temperamental first-nighters without an out-of-town try-out.

Lee had sent everyone home in the early hours of the morning with strict injunctions to appear at two o'clock the following afternoon to run through a final dress rehearsal before the opening that night. Mary with feverish activity the stage hands were shifting scenery, getting it into proper placement for quick changes, hanging drops and trying them. Electricians, their hands full of tools, wires and bulbs, were putting the lights up and down, experimenting with color effects, timing the various degrees of luminosity for each sketch. The wardrobe mistress rushed from one dressing room to another taking last-minute stitches in costumes.

In the midst of the chaos Lee was calling loudly for the participants in the Dixie sketch.

"Come on, everybody," he was shouting. "Mary—Jack, we've got to run-through this scene before dress rehearsal. I think we'll make some changes. No chorus, only the principals. This is our last chance, boys, so get it right."

The little group took their places, some already in costume, others still in their street clothes.

"Come on, Gene, take it from 'Gus, where've you been?'" Lee directed the stage manager-detective.

"Gus, where've you been?" began the detective, picking up his line.

"Boy, I been following' that swallow, an' the last I seen of it, it was headin' 'd south." Jack took his cue.

"But swallows don't go south this time of year," Carter stepped forward on his line.

"Heh! They suitin' does when this black boy's tippin' the hat." That's the cue for my 'Cotton Gin' number, Mr. Lee. Do you want me to take it without the chorus?" Carter asked.

"No, that's one reason I wanted you over this scene," Lee began. "I've been thinking about it, and I've decided that Jack had better do that number. It's Southern stuff and a blackface make-up fits it."

"But, Mr. Lee," Carter objected, his professional pride asserting itself, "that's where I do my specialty. It's the best number I have."

"Sorry, Carter," Lee tried to smooth over matters, "but I want this done as a real snappy Southern skit."

"Well, Mr. Lee, I've got enough numbers as it is," Jack interjected nervously, "and Carter's had all the rehearsals on it."

"That's all right. You know the song. You can carry another number all right. Now, I want it done like this." Lee was hurrying along the scene without further ado.

"Stand back, all of you. Jack, you're down front here. The principals moved towards the rear of the stage and Jack took his position in front of the footlights beside Lee.

"This is a big number," he spoke, quietly to Jack. "I want to get everything out of it that's in it. You can do it. That's why I'm giving you this chance. You're not nervous about it, are you?"

"No-o-o," Jack confessed.

"All right, then. I'm going to have nothing downstage here to get the spot on you. It will be your number if you carry it through the way you're doing this other stuff. You don't need to take it now. But you understand what I want?"

"Yes, I see, Mr. Lee."

"Jack, that's going to be wonderful." Mary watching from the wings, now moved up beside Jack as Lee began giving directions to the others. "It looks very much as though you're going to be your show."

"I know it, Mary, and it almost gets me scared," Jack admitted. "I swear, I lay awake having nightmares about it. Suppose I didn't get over it."

"No fear, Jack," Mary laughed, and she patted his hand in Jack's number if you carry it through the way you're doing this other stuff. You don't need to take it now. But you understand what I want?"

"You're going to be the whole show. Harry knows what he's doing."

Yet right at that moment it was not his own feelings that Jack was considering. He was nervous, true, but with the nervousness that is peculiar to almost every actor on a opening night.

DAUGHTER NAMED FATHER'S PARTNER

LONDON, March 24.—(UP)—England's first business designation of "And Daughter, Limited," was officially registered here recently.

The registration was that of a general provision business, which though working with only a small capital, has assumed the imposing title of H. Marnett And Daughter, Ltd. It is understood that the girl's father registered the title as a tribute to the way his daughter conducted the business for him during the war.

The daughter is named as governing director and chairman of the company.

Persia Closes Schools That Teach Holy Bible

TEHERAN, March 24.—(INS)—The American Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions Schools have been closed by order of the Persian government because they disregarded an order of the Ministry of Public Instruction of nearly a year ago, not to teach the Bible but give increasing prominence in their curriculum to the Koran. The English Church Missionary society as well as the American schools, which have establishments in various towns throughout Persia, are affected by this order.

As far as is known neither the American nor British legations took action.

DERE MOM

Circleville, O., March 25, 1928.
Dere Mom:—

Love is blind, ain't it? I found it out long ago but I guess I never real-ized it. I bought a girl some kandy an she sed thank'but my hands were so dirty that she couldn't ax ept the kandy. My but that made me sore mom.

I was ast to a party agen, these things is gettin' to be a bore, and they gave us all little teeny-weeny glasses of grape juice. They sed it had been in the family sence 1880. I sez to meself it surely is small for its age. I didn't tell them that but I thot it mitey hard.

Mom, I room with Ezekiel now. er no mom he is always borin money from me so one nite while he was asleep I went through his pockets and he woke up while I was doin' it an sez, "Hey there that money belongs to me." and rite quick I sez, "Well it won't be long now." Warent that brite. I got the money mom cause I'm stronger than Ezekiel.

Mom I read the other day where a song writer col-lect-ed .50 thousand $ fer the loss of a finger. It was one he played with. I thot that was funny so I ast me teacher about it an she sed not to ast so meny questions but really mom jst between you an me, nobody else. "I don't think that there teacher knowed herself."

Where I stay mom they has a radio an the other note I was listenin' in an I thot I was hearin' a duet but mom I was sorta disappointed cause it was only the same gink singin' in two apartments.

Mom I never km see why some of these here gals here are so siph-flurin'. One come up to me the other day an sez she won a prize on her essey on The Influence of Science on the Principals of Government. I tole her well that was rite nice but she ougter sence she's got her mind offa the study The Influence of the Vacuum Cleaner on the Carpet. She ain't spoke at me sence.

Mom I think I'll have to get a noo over-coat, not that theres any thing rong with this one but I can't pay fer it. I'm glad summers come in.

They was astin us de-fen-i-tions and I was ast to tell what a bachelor was. I tole 'em the nearest I could come to it was that it was a man who looks before he leaps and then he doesn't leap. The teacher sed that was purty good. Ain't you proud of your little sunlight? Mom, I was supposed to use the word dimension in a sentence an I sez, "Dimension me in his last letter? that was brite too."

I went into a rest-a-rant the other day an mom I found a fly in my ice cream and I called the waiter an tole him an he was very im-per-lite-ent cause he sed let him freeze and teach him a lesson. I was awful mad.

Mom some girl who that she ware smart ast me if I ever fell in love with words. She thot that I was dumb but I tole her yes especially when I got a letter from you that sed Enclosed find check. She sez to me sez she O you don't know-see-tend you do? I tole her I giest not and let it go at that.

My landlady gimme a chicken dinner on Sunday as she ast me if it wasn't rotten but I didn't want to hurt her feelin's by telling her rite on sto I sez The chicken may have been good morally but phical-ly it is a wreck. U no mom Ezekiel has a friend who was edu-kated at Eton an Oxford an he sure thinks he's it. He's always blowin to me about it an one day I'd jst hed enuf and I tole him warent it possible to sue them? All he sed was ig-no-ra-mus.

Mom I must close with this here yarn. I ware in geometry thother day an we was havin' bout parallel lines an how they couldn't meet. I tole the teacher it was jst like a story I heard that an ole man hed a parallel stroke on the ole man an woman hed a herd time makin' ends meet. She tole me that wasn't the same idea. Sweetly and lufely yurs.

Yur sun,

Hiram Hoehandle.

THE SWIMMING MATCHES

Three matches were dropped into the river and started floating downstream.

"Goodness, look how we can swim," they all commented to each other. They thought no one could surpass them in the art of swimming.

Soon a duck swam swiftly and gracefully by and later a fish darted past, with a boat following in their wake.

The matches still undaunted felt they were ahead but they were only in the place where the wind and ripples had blown them.

Are you like the matches? Do you go along in a turmoil somebody else has started and do you think you are going on by your own efforts? When everything is calm do you find you are just where the ripples and wind have taken you.

No one can swim for us. Each man must do his own work. Nothing can be achieved by another's efforts. Let us meet our own problems and solve them the best we can.

JUNIOR GIRLS LOSE

The freshmen girls won from the junior girls by 4 points Tuesday evening. The game was one sided in the first half. The juniors started in the last half when Kuhns made two baskets in a row. CHAPEL

Monday morning, March 19, chapel was held in the high school auditorium. Reverend Mac El-fresh gave a short talk, which was interesting. Mr. Rife then followed with the first of a series of lectures on the Constitution. These lectures will continue for a number of weeks. They are very interesting and instructive.

Mr. Walden:—What makes bread rise?
Harry B:—The holes in it.

"Robert," said the teacher, "Did you throw any of those paper wads sticking on the blackboard?"
"No," replied Bob, "Mine didn't stick."

IN SOCIETY

MISS ALLISON DELAPLAINE, SOCIETY EDITOR

Has Dinner Bridge
The dinner bridge Friday night at 6:30 o'clock at the home of Miss Dorothy McArthur, was a very delightful social affair. There were twenty guests present. Who were seated at small tables. Vases of pink sweet peas were tastefully used for decorations throughout the house. At the end of five frames of bridge, the favors for high score were awarded to Mrs. Harry Heffner and Mrs. Ruth McDonald.

Hold Inspection
The annual inspection of the Scioto Commandery Number 35, was held at the Masonic Temple, Friday evening. It was preceded by a 6:00 o'clock dinner, which was served by the ladies of the Eastern Star. At the inspection, the Order of the Temple was conferred. The inspecting officer was F. Oscar Schoedinger, Past Right

Eminent Commander. Harold Reeves of Lancaster, who played the pipe organ, also sang, as part of the program.

Members of the order were present from Columbus, Lancaster, Chillicothe, Mt. Sterling, Ash-ville and Washington C. H.

Attend Inspection
Mrs. Erma Stevenson and Mrs. E. H. Wardell attended the inspection of the R. T. King Chapter Order of Eastern Star in Columbus Friday evening. They were also honor guests at a six o'clock dinner, which preceded the inspection. Mrs. Wardell is the deputy grand matron of the twenty-third district.

Suit to Marshall Liens is on file

A suit to Marshall liens and sell has been filed in the Pickaway county common pleas court by the Farmers National bank, of Williamsport, against B. O. and Lucy Keller, of Monroe township; the Farmers Supply company, of New Holland; C. K. Hunsicker and the Security Building and Loan company of Mt. Sterling.

The plaintiff asserts that it has obtained judgment for $133.72 against the Kellers and asks that the other defendants set up their claims against them so that 3.08 acres of land owned by Kellers in Monroe township may be sold and the judgment satisfied. Adkins and Adkins represent the plaintiff.

NAMED ADMINISTRATRIX

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. P. B. Fitzwater, D. D.
Dean, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago
(©, 1928, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 25

REVIEW — JESUS PROCLAIMS THE KINGDOM OF GOD

GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the Kingdom, and healing their sicknesses and every disease.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Stories About Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Mark's Stories About Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Began His Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Early Ministry of Jesus.

The method of review must always be determined by the genius of the teacher, the grade of the school, and the aptitude of the pupil. For the senior and adult classes perhaps the most profitable method will be to summarize the facts of each lesson and to study the main teaching thereof. Since the great personality around which all the facts and teachings of the quarter gather is Jesus Christ, it ought not to be difficult to plan a review. Whatever plan is used, the teacher should have the matter thought out and assignment made to the different scholars a week ahead of time. The following suggestions are made:

Lesson for January 1. John the Baptist came in fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy announcing the advent of the Messiah. The leading lesson is that Jesus is the Messiah, the Son of God, as witnessed by John the Baptist and the Voice from the open heavens.

Lesson for January 8. Jesus taught with authority and demonstrated it by conquering demons, healing a fever, and cleansing a leper. Jesus Christ is able to save unto the uttermost, to deliver from all kinds of sickness and satanic powers.

Lesson for January 15. Jesus freely gave Himself to the task of healing the diseases of the people and forgiving their sins, and the leading lesson is that Jesus has not only power to heal the diseases of the body but to forgive sin, which is the cause of disease.

Lesson for January 22. Jesus lived His life in conformity with God's law. Conflict with the Jews over the matter of fasting and the Sabbath was due either to their failure to understand God's law or to its perversion. Human welfare can be realized only through conformity to God's law.

Lesson for January 29. With the increase of the fame of Jesus came increase of opposition. In spite of the opposition by His enemies He continued His mighty works in casting out demons and ministering to those in need.

Lesson for February 5. Jesus was misunderstood by His friends, His family and fellow townspeople, and violently opposed by the scribes and Pharisees. A spiritual nature is necessary in order to understand Christ.

Lesson for February 12. Jesus showed Himself the master teacher in picturing truth concerning His kingdom so as to conceal the truth from those who were not in sympathy with Him and by interpretation to be understood by His disciples.

Lesson for February 19. Jesus' deity was manifested in calming the storm-tossed sea and in healing the demoniac. Because of what Jesus is we should confide in Him.

Lesson for February 26. Jesus raised from the dead Jairus' daughter and healed the woman who had been afflicted for twelve years. Only a divine being could raise the dead.

Lesson for March 4. Jesus called twelve men and sent them forth to preach the gospel of the kingdom. Those sent forth were furnished with power to heal diseases.

Lesson for March 11. Christ had compassion upon the multitudes and created food to supply their hunger. Our small gifts and possessions, when placed at the Lord's disposal, are sufficient for any need.

Lesson for March 18. Christ denounced the empty forms and traditions of the Pharisees and showed that fillement can only come from the heart.

Says Women Abroad Are Individualistic

NEW YORK March 24.—(UP)—European women have become more individualistic than ever before in the history of the world. M. Eugene Suter, popular high style creator usually known only as "Eugene" said when he arrived here aboard the liner Majestic.

"American women have set the pace and European women are following closely and once in a while are spurring ahead," he said. "The bobbed-head has come to stay, but European women are adding to the bob with ropes and curls of hair, simulating long hair. This enables each to have a hair style of her own and to individualize herself."

Jefferson Not Honored

In 1850 delegates met and adopted a constitution for a state of Jefferson, with an area somewhat larger than Colorado, and the opposition held a second convention and established the "territory of Jefferson," which later became the territory of Colorado.

BOBBY JONES OFFERED RECORD PRICE TO BE PRO

COUNTRY CLUB ON BORDER TO ORGANIZE SOON

Atlanta Star Reported to Be Tendered Great Sum to Take Charge of Golf.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor
NEW YORK, March 24—Another attempt has been made to beguile Robert T. Jones, Jr., from the paths of amateur recidivism with light words and heavy money, the writer was informed today. Raymond Schindler, associated with a movement to establish a very chic country club on the Canadian border, near Buffalo, declares that he tendered Bobby an offer, many thousands in excess of anything ever paid a golf professional, to take charge of golf at the club and that he was waiting to hear from the young man in the matter.

Maybe this makes Brother Schindler a head waiter or something but, anyhow, his organization claims to have done this much for the interests of the royal amateurs.

That Vincent Richards, while a member of the Big Four in American lawn tennis, has signed a contract to take over men's tennis at the club, that Mary K. Browne, co-star in tennis and golf, also has identified herself with the club on a professional basis; that Helen Wainwright, Olympic athlete of other years, will have charge of the swimming.

Shore, is distant. The latter may turn out to be most important, as the Canadian shore is at least several miles distant, and sometimes the incentive is most pressing. Indeed, I have heard of lives actually being saved by a successfully negotiated arrival in Canada, particularly during the early morning hours.

Sink or swim, said Horatio Alger, but this is quite contrary to the by-laws of the organization, which is to be known as the International Club of the Niagara Frontier.

Unless I have been misinformed, the by-laws will require that those who are sunk simply must swim.

Anyway, brother Schindler's organization says the layout is under construction at a point mid-way between Buffalo and the falls.

And all I can say about that is there may be two sets of falls, one you see at Niagara and the other you feel as you descend, with unintentional rapidity, into the locker room after midnight.

Need one say more? As a matter of fact, perhaps one has said too much already.

Refusal Predicted
The idea of seducing, inducing or trading our Mr. Jones on this extremely commercial basis probably will meet the fate it so rightly deserves at the hands of a young man to whom virtue ever has been strictly its own reward.

The others said to be involved are not generally addicted to misgivings of this kind. Mr. Richards and Miss Browne deserted amateurism without visible regret a year or so ago and began playing it up with the Lenglen circus. Subsequently, Miss Browne approached the United States Golf association on bonded knee and, while the association didn't exactly bade her begone, neither did it give her the consolation she craved. It informed her that it would review her case when and if she made formal application for reinstatement.

It would seem now that Miss Brown has decided this is hardly worth the effort involved, and since the effort would be highly negligible, I am forced to concede that the lady is right.

What Do You Pay for "Boyish Form"?

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

WE are a people of fads and fancies. If a thing is the "style," or if it strikes our fancy, it makes no difference what it costs in time, money or trouble. We do thoroughly whatever we undertake.

For these reasons, when we are in the mood to start something, we should make sure it is right and we should know where it will lead us before we begin to practice the fad of the moment.

One of the most compelling of the present day fancies is the craze for the "boyish form." To be fat is the nightmare. To be slender and willowy is the day dream.

Whether this fad leading us? What will its pursuit cost us in health, vigor and length of days? There can be no doubt that dangerous habits in the practice of forced reduction. The health of many a misguided woman is being undermined by her efforts to be thin.

Lowered resistance, from the lack of essential foods, prepares the way for disease invasion. The use of dangerous drugs for fat reduction is the first step towards physical disaster.

In short, this craze for slenderness and thinness is a foolish, dangerous, unworthy ambition. It is the destruction of health, by resorting to powerful medicines, violent exercises, surgical operations, and abstinence from nourishing and sustaining foods. These vital organs and tissues of ours are too delicate and too easily deranged to justify ventures into unnecessary practices which may prove seriously damaging. Life and limb may be endangered by the fad.

If you owned a horse and treated it as many persons do their bodies in order to reduce, you would be arrested for cruelty to animals, fined $100 and possibly sent to prison for five years. Society would not tolerate such cruel and indecent treatment of a dumb animal.

Suppose you habitually took away from the horse all his oats and half his hay; strapped him in a thick blanket and housed him in a closet; not box-stall; hitched him to a cart and lashed him into full speed, keeping it up for hours at a time—would that be considered cruelty by the average jury? It would be and no excuse of yours could reduce the penalty of the law. You would cry in vain that you were trying to make the horse "better-looking," to give it a "coltish form."

You smile at this, but fail to apply the thought to your painful, damaging and unsatisfactory attempts at making your body different than Nature intended it to be.

Don Quixote's Windmill Will Be Reconstructed

MADRID, March 24—(INS)—Don Quixote's celebrated windmill at Toboso is to be reconstructed in the near future. It will duplicate in every way possible the old one which the hero of Cervantes took for a giant and will be ready for the annual influx of American tourists this spring. They are the ones responsible for this decision.

Those who follow Don Quixote's path across Spain are always disappointed at not finding the windmill at Toboso.

Love's Embers Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Eleanor Awakening from Her Stupor Misses the Locket.

I KNEW what had happened as soon as my eyes fell upon Eleanor Lincoln's face. In her opiate-induced sleep her fingers had strayed to her throat in the habitual gesture with which she was wont to assure herself of the safety of her necklace with the hidden miniature depending from it. The resultant shock to her sub-conscious mind had triumphed over the stupor induced by the drug, and she had awakened to a terror dazed, but real.

"Oh—oh! What shall I do?" she moaned, her eyes sending frantic glances from side to side. "My mother's miniature!"

With quickened pulses at this confirmation of the astounding theory I had formed concerning the identity of the young chateau of The Larches, I put my hand upon her groping neck and bent over her, speaking slowly and distinctly.

"Have you lost something?" I asked, then quickly averted my eyes, for she might have a chance to pull herself together. Sooner or later, I knew that I must tell her of my newly discovered knowledge, but I did not wish to startle her while she was still so upset over her loss.

There was a silence of several seconds, then, with a betraying catch of the breath, she said, tremulously:

"I have lost my chain and pendant."

"I don't remember having it after I heard the news of Aunt Lincoln's illness. Do you remember when you saw it around my neck last?"

"I didn't see it when you were at the farmhouse this morning," I said truthfully. "For you remember, you kept your jacket on, and had a silk scarf around your neck. I do remember that you clutched at your scarf as if you were choking when you heard the news about your aunt. Perhaps you loosened the chain then. But are you sure it is lost? May I not have caught in your gown somewhere? We put you into bed with a mild warm solution of boric acid several times a day and apply 1% yellow oxide of mercury ointment to the lids at night. However, have the eyes tested to see if glasses are needed."

"Pray do not trouble," she said with a touch of her old hauteur. "I am better now. I will look for it myself."

I stepped back from the bed while she thrust fumbling hands beneath the blanket. The instant she uttered a joyful little scream, while the eyes, which I secretly had likened to pansies, were suddenly incandescent.

"Oh, it isn't lost! I have it safe!" The words were a gasp as she drew the locket out, one she had tightly closed over the miniature in a futile attempt to hide it from me. For a second or two she looked at me, trying vainly to hold fast to the crimsoned deceiver which was the heritage of her birth and training. But, after all, she was only a young frightened girl who had gone through much, and I was not surprised when she threw out her hands to me, the necklace still in them, and burst into hysterical sobbing.

I made no attempt to soothe her beyond holding her firmly in my arms until the paroxysm had passed. Then I laid her back against her pillows and spoke authoritatively:

"Lie still and I'll bathe your face and bring you a drink of water."

She obeyed me, lay passive as I lavied her face and hands. But her great black eyes were searching my face and I was not surprised when, after I had finished, she said breathlessly, as if the words were forced from her:

"I can't stand it any longer. I must tell you, and you seem so strong and kind and wise. I know I can trust you."

Advice to Girls By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I met a young man a few weeks ago, while he was here on his vacation. He has taken me out many times, and we have been quite friendly. Should I, before he leaves, ask him to write or should I not say anything and start the correspondence myself?

JUST ME.

JUST ME: If this boy is as interested in you as you seem to imagine, I am sure he will suggest corresponding before he leaves. If he does not mention writing you might, when he leaves, express the desire to hear from him. It is his place to write first, since he is the one going away, and I should not advise you to write until you hear from him.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

SPORTSMATTER

FRANK GETTY

Baseball strategy, like broth, can be spoiled by too much collaboration.

Several major league clubs which adopted the "board of strategy" system have returned to first principles and now leave the direction of the team while on the field to a single individual.

The Cleveland Indians had as many managers as Paolino Uzcudun last year, and were kicked around the second division all season, finishing in sixth place.

This year, Roger Peckinpaugh, the club's new manager, will run things himself without the assistance of a "board of strategy."

This is not to say that consultation off the field is not the essence of baseball success. No manager would be so pig-headed as to neglect the advice of veterans regarding opposing pitchers, batters and baserunners. But when the game is on, a single source of direction works better than the huddle system.

Some clubs, especially those with bench managers, have a captain to direct the team while it is on the field. Sometimes the captain is merely a figurehead, with as much to say about running things as the nickel greyhound on the radiator cap. Sometimes he assumes responsibilities which make for divided authority.

Something connected with Rogers Hornsby's captaincy of the New York Giants brought about his transfer to the Boston Braves. Arriving at the training camp of the Braves this year, Hornsby was confronted with a new difficulty.

Should he accept the captaincy of the Boston Club, considering the fact that Jack Slattery, its manager, was new to major league baseball and might be sensitive about the possibility of divided authority? Hornsby decided he had better not be captain.

At this juncture, Slattery proved his worth by not only insisting that Rogers captain the team but invited the star second baseman to room with him and assist in all matters of strategy. Naturally, Hornsby accepted, and the Braves will be a far stronger club as the result.

The New York Giants, after the departure of Hornsby, appointed Travis Jackson as captain. McDraw is a bench manager who likes to have a captain in charge of things on the playing field. In this respect, he differs from Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees.

Although Huggins is a bench manager, he does not believe the team needs a captain. It has not had one for six years, ever since Babe Ruth was deported. Since Huggins has won four pennants in those six years, he is entitled to get along without a captain if he so chooses.

Some clubs are blessed with a plethora of potential field leaders in addition to a capable manager on the bench. Consider the Philadelphia Athletics, who have, in addition to Connie Mack, Kid Gleason, Ira Thomas, and Eddie Collins, have Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker to help along with the thinking. By the time a thought got through this collection of gray matter, the other team would have scored seven runs.

If Mack is to get anywhere in 1928, he will have to ask Ty, Tris, Eddie, Ira and the Kid to get together and agree upon a single field general.

NEW YORK, March 24—(INS)—The final two blocks of the special 600-point three-cushion billiard match between Willie Hoppe and Allen Hall will be played today. Hoppe is leading by 500 to 349.

Hall won the seventh block, 56 to 50, but Hoppe swamped the St. Louisian in the eighth block, 50 to 22.

Training Camp Briefs

By International News Service

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 24—Brooklyn's Aces, Dizzy Vance and Jess Petty, have not yet rounded into form. The St. Louis Browns handed the pair an 8 to 3 beating here yesterday.

Kress, the Brown's Rookie shortstop, hit a homer and a single. The teams will play here again today.

TAMPA, Fla., March 24—The ancient squeeze play, worked by Bluege and Tate, enabled the Washington Senators to nose out the New York Giants here yesterday in the tenth inning, 6 to 5. The Senators pounded Henry and Benton for fourteen hits and George Sisler stole home. The second game of the series will be played today.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 24—Babe Ruth was nursing a sore right hand today. He attempted to strangle a stone crab but the crustacean won the decision.

The Yankees are still practicing at their camp here.

Dallas, Tex., March 24—The White Sox were downcast today over their sorry exhibition here yesterday in the opening game of the series with Dallas. The Sox were able to get only four scattered hits off the Steers' brand of pitching and Dallas won 3 to 1. Williamson and Thomas, Sox hurlers, were nipped for eight safeties.

LOS ANGELES, March 24—The Cubs are still going strong in the opening game of their exhibition series with Hollywood. Here yesterday, McCarthy's boys basted masted out ten base hits and topped the verdict, 6 to 4. Home runs by Wilson and Chrysler featured the Bruins' attack. The second game of the series against the stars is on tap today.

United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WE are a people of fads and fancies. If a thing is the "style," or if it strikes our fancy, it makes no difference what it costs in time, money or trouble. We do thoroughly whatever we undertake.

For these reasons, when we are in the mood to start something, we should make sure it is right and wise. We should know where it will lead us before we begin to practice the fad of the moment.

One of the most compelling of the present day fancies is the craze for the "boyish form." To be fat is the nightmare. To be slender and willowy is the day dream.

Whether this fad leading us? What will its pursuit cost us in health, vigor and length of days? There can be no doubt that danger lurks in this practice of forced reduction. The health of many a misguided woman is being undermined by her efforts to be thin.

Lowered resistance, from the lack of essential food, prepares the way for disease invasion. The use of dangerous drugs for fat reduction is the first step towards physical disaster.

In short, this craze for slenderness and thinness is a foolish, dangerous, unworthy ambition. It is time for you to think about it seriously. It is time for you to realize what may happen if you continue to travel this route.

I cannot understand how any wise person can take a chance on the destruction of health, by resorting to powerful medicines, violent exercises, surgical operations, and abstinence from nourishing and sustaining foods. These vital organs and tissues of ours are too delicate and too easily deranged to justify ventures into unnecessary practices which may prove seriously damaging. Life and limb may be endangered by them.

If you owned a horse and treated it as many persons do their bodies in order to reduce, you would be arrested for cruelty to animals, fined $500, and possibly sent to prison for five years. Society would not tolerate such cruel and indecent treatment of a dumb animal.

Suppose you habitually took away from the horse all his oats and half his hay; strapped him in a thick blanket and housed him in a close, hot box-stall; hitched him to a cart and lashed him into full speed, keeping it up for hours at a time—would that be considered cruelty by the average jury? It would be and no excuse of yours could reduce the penalty of the law. You would cry in vain that you were trying to make the horse better-looking, to give it a "colish form."

You smile at this, but fail to apply the thought to your painful, damaging and unscientific attempts at making your body different than Nature intended it to be.

Love's Embers Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Eleanor Awakening from Her Stupor Misses the Locket.

I KNEW what had happened as soon as my eyes fell upon Eleanor Lincoln's face. In her opiate-induced sleep her fingers had strayed to her throat in the habitual gesture with which she was wont to assure herself of the safety of her necklace with the hidden miniature locket from it. The resultant thump to her subconscious mind had rumbled over the stupor induced by the drug, and she had awakened to terror dazed, but real.

"Oh—oh! What shall I do?" she moaned, her eyes sending frantic glances from side to side. "My mother's miniature!"

With quickened pulses at this confirmation of the astounding theory I had formed concerning the identity of the young chateau of the Larches, I put my hand upon her groping ones and bent over her, speaking slowly and distinctly.

"Have you lost something?" I asked, then quickly averted my eyes, for she might have a chance to pull herself together. Sooner or later, I knew that I must tell her of my newly discovered knowledge, but I did not wish to startle her while she was still so upset over her loss.

There was a silence of several seconds, then, with a betraying catch of the breath, she said, tremulously:

"I have lost my chain and pend-

Advice to Girls By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I met a young man a few weeks ago, while he was here on his vacation. He has taken me out many times, and we have been quite friendly. Should I, before he leaves, ask him to write or should I not say anything and start the correspondence myself?

JUST ME.

JUST ME: If this boy is as interested in you as you seem to imagine, I am sure he will suggest corresponding before he leaves. If he does not mention writing you might, when he leaves, express the desire to hear from him. It is his place to write first, since he is the one going away, and I should not advise you to write until you hear from him.

Tired of Life

About 13,000 people kill themselves in the United States each year. Last year the records showed the oldest suicide was ninety-seven and the youngest six years old.—Woman's Home Companion.

Baseball strategy, like broth, can be spoiled by too much collaboration.

Several major league clubs which adopted the "board of strategy" system have returned to first principles and now leave the direction of the team while on the field to a single individual.

The Cleveland Indians had as many managers as Paolino Uzcudun last year, and were kicked around the second division all season, finishing in sixth place.

This year, Roger Peckinpaugh, the club's new manager, will run things himself without the assistance of a "board of strategy."

This is not to say that consultation of the field is not the essence of baseball success. No manager would be so pig-headed as to neglect the advice of veterans regarding opposing pitchers, batters and baserunners. But when the game is on, a single source of direction works better than the huddle system.

Some clubs, especially those with bench managers, have a captain to direct the team while it is on the field. Sometimes the captain is merely a figurehead, with as much to say about running things as the nickel greyhound on the radiator cap. Sometimes he assumes responsibilities which make for divided authority.

Something connected with Rogers Hornsby's captaincy of the New York Giants brought about his transfer to the Boston Braves. Arriving at the training camp of the Braves this year, Hornsby was confronted with a new difficulty.

Should he accept the captaincy of the Boston Club, considering the fact that Jack Slatery, its manager, was new to major league baseball and might be sensitive about the possibility of divided authority? Hornsby decided he had better not be captain.

At this juncture, Slatery proved his worth by not only insisting that Rogers captain the team but invited the star second baseman to room with him and assist in all matters of strategy. Naturally, Hornsby accepted, and the Braves will be a far stronger club as the result.

The New York Giants, after the departure of Hornsby, appointed Travis Jackson as captain. McGraw is a bench manager who likes to have a captain in charge of things on the playing field. In this respect, he differs from Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees.

Although Huggins is a bench manager, he does not believe the team needs a captain. It has not had one for six years, ever since Babe Ruth was deposed. Since Huggins has won four pennants in those six years, he is entitled to get along without a captain if he so chooses.

Some clubs are blessed with a plethora of potential field leaders in addition to a capable manager on the bench. Consider the Philadelphia Athletics, who have, in addition to Connie Mack, Kid Gleason, Ira Thomas, and Eddie Collins, have Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker to help along with the thinking. By the time a thought got through this collection of gray matter, the other team would have scored seven runs.

If Mack is to get anywhere in 1928, he will have to ask Ty, Tris, Eddie, Ira and the Kid to get together and agree upon a single field general.

HOPPE STILL IN LEAD

NEW YORK, March 24—(INS)—The final two blocks of the special 600-point three-cushion billiard match between Willie Hoppe and Allen Hall will be played today. Hoppe is leading by 500 to 349.

Hall won the seventh block, 56 to 50, but Hoppe swamped the St. Louisian in the eighth block, 50 to 22.

Training Camp Briefs

By International News Service.
WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 24—Brooklyn's Aces, Dazzy Vance and Jess Petty, have not yet rounded into form. The St. Louis Browns handed the pair an 8 to 3 beating here yesterday. Kress, the Brown's Rookie shortstop, hit a homer and a single. The teams will play here again today.

TAMPA, Fla., March 24—The ancient squeegee play, worked by Bluege and Tate, enabled the Washington Senators to nose out the New York Giants here yesterday in the tenth inning, 6 to 5. The Senators pounded Henry and Benton for fourteen hits and George Sisler stole home. The second game of the series will be played today.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 24—Babe Ruth was nursing a sore right hand today. He attempted to strangle a stone crab but the crustacean won the decision.

The Yankees are still practically at their camp here.

Dallas, Tex., March 24—The White Sox were downcast today over their sorry exhibition here yesterday in the opening game of the series with Dallas. The Sox were able to get only four scattered hits off the Steers' brand of pitching and Dallas won 3 to 1. Williamson and Thomas, Sox hurlers, were nicked for eight safeties.

LOS ANGELES, March 24—The Cubs are still going strong in the opening game of their exhibition series with Hollywood here yesterday. McCarthy's boys hammered out ten base hits and capped the verdict, 6 to 4. Home runs by Wilson and Cuyler featured the Bruins' attack. The second game of the series against the stars is on tap today.

Raphael Picture Found By Strasbourg Artist

ST. PETERSBURG, March 24—(INS)—What is believed to be a masterpiece by the painter Raphael has just been discovered at Munster, by Prof. Plenge of this city.

It represents the Madonna with the Holy Child and St. John in the background and the finder thinks the picture was done at a moment when he was at the height of his skill and had freed himself from the influence of Michel Angelo.

Don Quixote's Windmill Will Be Reconstructed

MADRID, March 24—(INS)—Don Quixote's celebrated windmill at Toboso is to be reconstructed in the near future. It will duplicate in every way possible the old one which the hero of Cervantes took for a giant and will be ready for the annual influx of American tourists this spring. They are the ones responsible for this decision.

Those who follow Don Quixote's path across Spain are always disappointed at not finding the windmill at Toboso.
